House Upsets Truman Veto Of Postal Pay Raises

Vote of 213 to 72 Polled to Uphold Bill Giving Boosts To Ex-Servicemen

By Jerry Klutz Post Reporter

The House acted swiftly yesterday and overrode the President's veto of a bill to grant pay raises that would average $225 a year to an estimated 100,000 World War II veterans who joined the postal service after their discharge.

The roll-call vote was 231 to 72, substantially more than the required two-thirds majority. The Senate will vote on the President's veto in a day or so. Leaders of postal unions and veterans' groups want to be sure a large number of friendly Senators are on the floor before seeking a vote. Yesterday's vote on the veto upset the plans of House leaders. It had been agreed informally to refer the veto to the House Post-office and Civil Service Committee. Chairman Murray, who opposed the bill, had consented to take up the message at a meeting of his committee on Thursday. Sponsors of the bill on its committee agreed to the plan.

Shortly after the House convened, Murray moved that the veto be referred to his committee. Representative Marcantonio (A. L. N. Y.), objected on the ground of no quorum. A vote was then taken on Murray's motion and it was defeated, 163 to 115. A vote to override was then taken.

There was no argument one way or the other on the merits of the veto message. In his veto message, read earlier to the House, the President denounced the bill in blunt words. He pointed out it would discriminate against the other 800,000 World War II veterans in Government; that the bill was an "indirect bonus" and that it would throw the entire postal salary system out of balance.

Furthermore, the President said it would be unwise to increase the huge postal deficit at a time when mail deliveries have been cut to save money. He estimated the cost of the bill at 24 million for the first year, and an eventual total of 163 million.

Johnston Calls Thurmond Liar; Challenge Hurdled

Newberry, S. C., June 26 (AP)—Senator Olin Johnston (D., S. C.), today called Gov. J. Strom Thurmond a liar. Thurmond, speaking from the same platform, offered to meet the Senator outside the Newberry County courthouse after the joint political speaking.

Nothing happened outside. Both men circulated among a crowd on the lawn, shaking hands with friends. Thurmond, 1948 Presidential nominee of the State's Rights party, is opposing Johnston in the July 11 Democratic primary.

Johnston shouted "I want to tell you that you are a liar" when the Governor charged the Senator had failed to protest in the Senate against a Presidential order ending racial segregation in the armed forces.

"If he wants to meet me in front of the courthouse when this meeting is over I'll be standing out here," Thurmond responded.

Three-Year Terms D. C. Judges Reappoint Three As Education Board Members

The District Court judges yesterday reappointed Dr. James A. Gannon, Mrs. Velma Williams and Albert Steinem as members of the Board of Education.

The reappointments, which are for a three-year period, were announced by Chief Judge Bolitha J. Laws, following an executive meeting of the judges.

Dr. Gannon, Washington surgeon, has been a member of the board since 1940. He received his medical degree at Georgetown University in 1906 and served at one time as chief surgeon at Gallinger Hospital and on the surgical staff of Georgetown-University Hospital. He lives at 1915 Biltmore st. nw.

Mrs. Williams, who lives at 2700 Georgia ave. nw., has been a member of the board since 1939. She is a graduate of the Miner Normal School and taught school in Mississippi for 10 years. She has served as president of the James Monroe Parent-Teacher Association and of the Pleasant Plains Civic Association.

Steinem, a lawyer, was appointed to the board in April, 1948, to fill a vacancy created by the resignation of Dr. Robert A. Maurer. A graduate of the Georgetown University Law School, he has offices in the Colorado Building and lives at 3821 Kanawha st. nw.

Compromise Conference Today House Passes D. C. Rent Bill; Curbs Run Through January

The House yesterday voted to continue District rent control through January 31, 1951.

Into the rent bill, the House also wrote an amendment which Westchester apartment tenants saw as shattering their defenses against sale of the building on a cooperative purchase plan. The tenants have recently recorded overwhelming opposition to such a sale.

With the present law expiring Friday, the House gave the silent treatment to the Senate-approved formula for a six-month extension of rent control with an additional six months at the option of the District Commissioners.

The House bill, cleared by a standing vote of 103 to 72, will be sent to the Senate today. The Senate is expected to send the House amendments to conference at 2 p. m. today, for settlement of differences.

The amendment affecting the Westchester was presented by Representative Thomas G. Abernethy (D., Miss.). He explained it would modify a portion of existing law that requires 65 percent of tenants in a building to enter a cooperative. See DISTRICT, Page 11, Column 3.

Physician Saves Infant From Flaming Carriage

A physician making his rounds yesterday afternoon snatched a 7-week-old infant from its flaming baby carriage, saving it from possible death.

Young John Stephen Miller, only child of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Miller, 221 Orange st. se., suffered only a minor burn of the right foot.

Dr. Leo Mugmon, 35, of 2946 2d st. se., said he was driving near Miller's apartment, saw smoke from the carriage and seized the child. A second later, he reported, the carriage "suddenly burst into a crisp—a cinder."

The child's father said he found a pack of matches and three burned matches near the carriage. Police last night were investigating a report that neighborhood youngsters might have set the fire as a prank.

Senate Tie Broken; CCC Bill Is Passed

Barkley to Rescue; Move to Cut Imports Of Crops Surplus In U. S. Defeated

By John W. Ball Post Reporter

Vice President Barkley saved the Administration's bill to add two billion dollars to the farm price support program yesterday when he voted to break a 35-to-35 Senate tie. All 35 votes for the bill were Democrats; all but three opponents were Republicans.

Agriculture Secretary Charles F. Brannan will announce this year's price support levels for the six basic crops for which supports are mandatory at 3 p. m. today. The law requires that wheat, corn, cotton, rice, peanuts and tobacco be supported this year at 90 percent of parity. Brannan put off today's announcement for which farmers have been waiting for months, until after the close of today's commodity markets so as not to disturb trading.

Several Months Late

The programs are several months late, owing to the delay in passing the measure. The law requires that price programs be announced before farmers plant their crops, so that they will know what support to expect. However, the law also forbids any announcement unless there is money available to meet all obligations. Brannan has insisted that the Commodity Credit Corporation, which handles the price programs, lack sufficient funds.

The bill, which now goes to President Truman for his signature, permits CCC to borrow an additional two billion dollars from the Treasury. It already has authority to borrow 4750 million. Of this, it already has about four billion dollars invested in the price program. Half represents loans to farmers on storable commodities. The remainder has been paid for commodities, either storable or semipermanent, which CCC has taken over either in foreclosure of loans or through purchase.

After Extended Debate

Yesterday's vote came after several days' debate on an amendment by Senator Warren G. Magnuson (D., Wash.) to shut off imports of price-supported commodities when they are in surplus in this country. The amendment had been in the original bill passed by the Senate, but had been toned down in conference.

Magnuson asked that the Senate send the measure back to conference. When the vote was taken, however, Magnuson was supported by only two other Democrats, Fear of Delaware and McFarland of Arizona.

Of Senators near Washington, Byrd (Va.) was paired against the measure with Lucas (Ill.) for it. Robertson (Va.) and Tydings (Md.) voted for it. O'Connor (Md.) was absent. Neely (W. Va.) voted absent. Kilgore (W. Va.) was absent.

Text Recorded by FBI

Senate Group Quizzes Service On Conversation With Jaffe

By Alfred Friendly Post Reporter

John S. Service, State Department official, was questioned by Senate investigators yesterday on the transcript of a recorded conversation in which, Service's accusers have charged, he gave secret military information in 1945 to Philip J. Jaffe.

Service was quizzed on the document, a text made by the FBI of a conversation tapped by a secret microphone planted in Jaffe's hotel room. In closed session by the Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee.

Although Service had previously requested that the full transcript be made public, Subcommittee Chairman Tydings (D., Md.) declined to make it available yesterday, declaring "it would not be fair" to release it without the accompanying testimony about it and other evidence in the record.

According to Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.) who attacked Service four months ago for his involvement in the Amerasia "stolen documents" case, the FBI recording indicated that Service gave Jaffe military secrets and did it knowingly, in a conversation in May, 1945.

Policy Now Bars Sending U. S. Troops

Decision of Security Council Still Stands; U. N. Action, Set for Today, Is Awaited

By Ferdinand Kuhn Post Reporter

American help to South Korea remained limited yesterday to (1) emergency shipments of arms and ammunition and (2) support of the United Nations' efforts to stop the Communist invasion.

There was no sign last night, at the end of another tense and anxious day, that President Truman had decided to resist the invasion by the use of American troops from nearby Japan.

Existing American policy toward Korea was fixed by the National Security Council months ago. Its basic premise was that South Korea would be a strategic liability in the event of an invasion by the Communists in the north.

Troops Ruled Out

Accordingly, the National Security Council ruled out the commitment of American troops and decided to go no further than sending arms and supporting the U. N. if an invasion should come.

This policy may change if the United Nations should call on its members to send armed forces. The U. N. Security Council meets today to consider further action in view of the failure of its cease-fire order.

But so far American policy has not changed, an authoritative source said emphatically yesterday. It is still a policy that could be called all-aid-short-of-troops.

The President bore out this interpretation with a cautiously worded statement yesterday morning, after his meeting at Blair House the previous evening with his highest military and diplomatic advisers.

His statement made it clear that the United States was not moving ahead of the United Nations, and was blaming the Northern Korean government rather than Soviet Russia for the invasion.

"I conferred Sunday evening," the President said, "with the Secretaries of State and Defense, their senior advisers and the Joint Chiefs of Staff about the situation in the Far East created by unprovoked aggression against the Republic of Korea."

Pleased With U. N. Speed

"The Government of the United States is pleased with the speed and determination with which the United Nations Security Council acted to order a withdrawal of the invading forces to positions north of the thirty-eighth parallel. In accordance with the resolution of the Security Council, the United States will vigorously support the efforts of the council to terminate this serious breach of the peace."

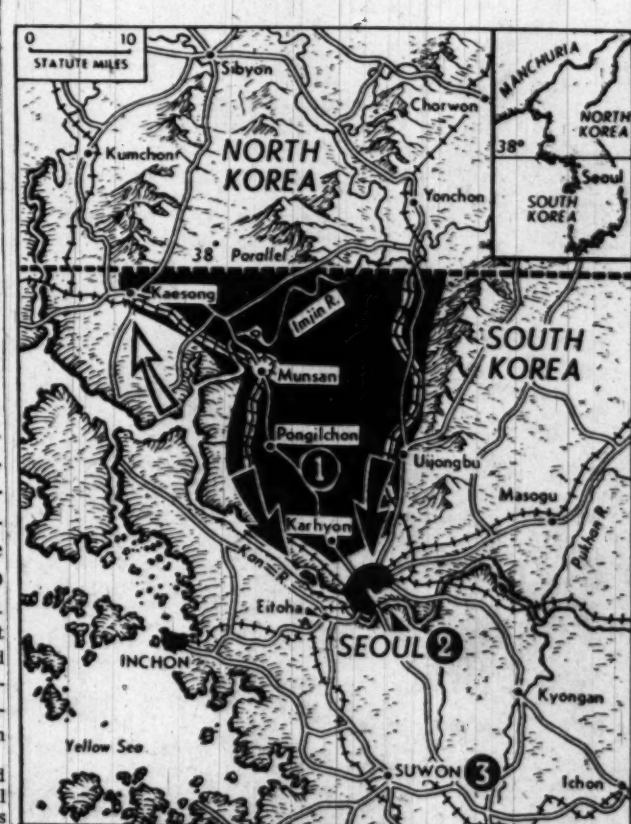

"Our concern over the lawless action taken by the forces from North Korea, and our sympathy and support for the people of Korea in this situation, are being seen TRUMAN, Page 6, Column 3.

In public testimony last week, Service denied giving Jaffe any secret military plans, pointing out that he did not know any that he could have imparted. He stated frankly, however, that in discussions with Jaffe about China, where Service had long been stationed, it was impossible not to talk about the military situation.

The FBI had hitherto not released the transcript of the conversation, but made it available to the Tydings subcommittee yesterday morning.

From Tydings' comments to reporters after yesterday's meeting, it was inferred that the FBI had also let a State Department loyalty board, looking into Service's record, see the document, and that over the weekend the loyalty board had interrogated him about it.

Tydings hinted yesterday that he may be close to winding up the four-month investigation his subcommittee has made of the Amerasia case and of the multitude of other McCarthy charges. He is See AMERASIA, Page 9, Col. 5.

Attack's Surprise Probed

Congress yesterday darkly debated the Communist invasion of South Korea and even the possibility of open war with Russia. Top Capitol spokesmen on foreign affairs counseled legislators to be calm while the President explored alternative courses of action.

Congress Eyes Chance of War; Keep Calm, Its Leaders Urge

By Robert C. Albright Post Reporter

Senate Foreign Relations Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.) suggested the United Nations has overall authority to call on some member nations to send troops to Korea if it finds such action is necessary.

State Department, Defense and Intelligence chiefs were questioned in closed session by the Senate Appropriations Committee on whether this Government was caught "flat-footed" by the Red attack.

In these other developments: 1. A full-dress conference of Republicans favored giving aid short of war to South Korea, but GOP Conference Chairman Eugene Millikin (Colo.) told newsmen: "They (the Republicans) were unanimous that the incident should not be used as a provocation for war."

2. Senator Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) said: "I am not sure that the United States is talking it up yet."

The Americans appeared to be readying their demand for Tuesday's meeting of the Security Council (3 p. m. EDT). Chief Delegate Warren R. Austin sent his No. 1 assistant, Ambassador Ernest A. Gross, to Washington for top-level talks at the State Department. The United States mission was in conferences all day and also in contact with Washington by telephone.

The U. N. meanwhile, received a dark picture of events in Korea from its commission there. The commission said the North Korean advances have created a dangerous situation "with possibilities of rapid deterioration."

It said it is impossible to estimate the situation that will exist tomorrow in Seoul. As this report was received, new dispatches said the North Korean forces had thrown tanks around Seoul's outskirts.

The commission message, to Secretary-General Trygve Lie continued: "In view of the commission's past experience and the existing situation, it is recommended that the United States should take such action as may be necessary to prevent the North Korean forces from advancing further into the Republic of Korea."

Mustang Destroys Plane 'Interfering' With Evacuation Of U. S. Civilians

Tokyo (Tuesday), June 27 (U.P.)—Armored forces of the North Korean Communist army swept into Seoul today.

Advices to Gen. Douglas MacArthur said the Red armor entered the capital of the South Korean Republic about 9:30 a. m. (7:30 p. m. EDT Monday).

United Press Correspondent Jack James telephoned from Kimpo Field, the airport for Seoul, that a United States Air Force plane shot down a Korean Communist fighter plane at 8:15 a. m. (6:15 p. m. EDT Monday) while it was protecting the evacuation of Americans.

MacArthur later announced that the Air Force F-82 twin Mustang "was forced to shoot down a Yak fighter which interfered with the evacuation efforts."

MacArthur added that he would continue to provide "complete air cover" until all Americans are evacuated from Southern Korea and removed to Japan.

City May Have Fallen MacArthur's advice indicated the city had fallen or was about to fall to the advanced elements of the Russian-armed Communists who had spent the night in the outskirts of Seoul.

The Communists had opened a full-scale war on the American-sponsored South Korean Republic with an artillery bombardment starting at 4 a. m. Sunday.

In approximately 53½ hours they had smashed through all defense lines of the South Koreans—armed chiefly with rifles and light machineguns—and had swept southward 36 miles into the capital.

"Armored elements of the North Korean forces began entering the city of Seoul at approximately 9:30 a. m. today," MacArthur announced.

Americans Arrive in Japan MacArthur's announcement of the shooting down of a Russian-armed Yak fighter by the Air Force protector plane said:

War Nerves Cause Record Slump on Stock Exchange

New York, June 26 (AP)—War-jittery traders swamped the stock market today.

Some 4 billion dollars was cut from the market value of all stocks listed on the exchange. Trading volume at 3,910,000 shares was the largest in 10 years.

At the same time, buyers flocked to the commodity pits, sending most grains, foodstuffs and raw materials soaring. Some commodities, such as rubber and soybeans, were bid up the daily permitted limit.

A few reacted late in the day, however. Cotton and cocoa closed lower, and many others, including soybeans, closed below the day's top figures. Tin and rubber advanced in the spot market as buyers feared war could clip off Far Eastern sources of essential materials.

Three waves of selling hit the New York Stock Exchange, and the high-speed ticker tape fell behind for 45 minutes at one stretch. It was the biggest break in the stock market since the day after Labor Day, 1940, when approximately $4,700,000,000 was whittled from the listed market value of stocks on the exchange.

House Will Debate Excise Bill Today

Fulbright Acts RFC Transfer To Commerce Faces Fight

A Senate committee yesterday filed a report, formally noncommittal, but actually strongly in opposition to the proposed transfer of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to the Commerce Department.

The change is specified in the Administration's reorganization plan No. 24. It will take place automatically on July 9 unless the Senate or the House rejects the proposal.

A resolution to defeat the plan has been proposed by Senator Fulbright (D., Ark.). He claims he has enough votes to beat it. His plan, it is understood, is to call his resolution up for Senate action on July 7.

Yesterday's report, given to the Senate by the Committee on Expenditures, through its chairman, Senator McClellan (D., Ark.), contains no specific recommendation for or against the Fulbright resolution.

But it indicates that the majority conclusion is that the proposed transfer of the RFC is unwise because it would render the lending agency more subject to partisan political considerations.

The conclusion is that the RFC's independent status in the executive branch, like that of the regulatory agencies, would be jeopardized if it were subject to the supervision of a Cabinet officer.

There would be, the committee majority felt, just one more intervening layer, in the form of the Secretary of Commerce, between the Congress and the agency.

Under a bipartisan board, as it is now, the RFC is more responsive to the will of Congress in carrying out the directions Congress gave when it created the agency, the report argues.

Overbilling Charged in Lustron Case

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

A half-million-dollar fraudulent overbilling of the Lustron Corporation, was charged yesterday by Government investigators.

The report, which has already been referred to the Department of Justice, was aired before the Senate Banking and Currency Subcommittee now studying RFC activities.

Paul J. Cotter, chief of RFC's investigation division, told the committee that the Commercial Home Equipment Corp. of Chicago appeared to have over-billed the now-defunct Lustron company for $500,000 on the rent of tractors never delivered.

Mails Use Suggested

Cotter pointedly suggested that there is "considerable evidence of the use of the mails," in connection with these transactions.

He suggested that fraud may also have been committed against the RFC.

"Further, in view of the dual capacity of Paul Buckley, who acted not only as principal of the Commercial Home but was a director of the borrower corporation, Lustron, it is more than a possibility, in the light of all the circumstances involved, that fraud has been committed against the RFC," he said.

Subcommittee Chairman J. William Fulbright (D., Ark.) and Senator Paul H. Douglas (D., Ill.) drew particular attention to the fact that under committee procedure officials of the Commercial Home Equipment Corp. had been invited to appear at air-side of the story, but had not done so.

Under Long Survey

The subcommittee has had the tangled affairs of the Lustron Corp. under survey for several months.

The present inquiry is limited to the Lustron-Commercial Home Equipment Corporation dealings.

Fulbright yesterday said he was not familiar with the charges made by Joseph Ferguson, Ohio State auditor and Democratic candidate for the Senate, that other members of Congress beside Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.) had connections with Lustron. McCarthy received $10,000 for writing an article for Lustron on prefabricated housing.

The subcommittee chairman said he was likewise unfamiliar with the statement of United States District Court Judge Underwood of Columbus, Ohio, that if the Attorney General did not take action in the Lustron case he would summon a grand jury to do so.

Fulbright said he did not know what action, if any, Attorney General J. Howard McGrath planned to take. The subcommittee, he said, was merely opening up the facts it had uncovered for public view and study.

Cotter pointed out yesterday that in October, 1948, Paul Boardman, RFC examiner in Cleveland,

A "take-it-all-or-nothing" tag was pinned on the $1,010,000,000 excise tax reduction bill yesterday, as it was cleared for House debate beginning today.

Democratic leaders set a vote for Thursday. They were so certain of victory that they didn't bother to count noses in advance.

But Republicans were trying to whip up support for a substitute measure, the terms of which were not immediately disclosed. House GOP Leader Martin of Massachusetts has assailed the Democratic measure as "a phony tax-relief bill, framed in political panic."

The House Rules Committee approved special procedure for House consideration of the measure, barring any amendments. However, Republicans will be given one opportunity to present their substitute for a vote.

GOP spokesmen have criticized the increase in taxes on big corporations proposed in the Democratic bill.

Republicans joined with Democrats in supporting the no-amendment rule. The bill is very complicated, and Chairman Doughton (D., N. C.) of the House Ways and Means Committee and Representative Reed of New York, senior committee Republican, said nothing but confusion would result if it went to the House floor with no restrictions on amendments.

The House hopes to complete action on the measure by Thursday night, so that members can take a long Fourth of July weekend.

Then the Senate gets its chance at the bill. Senate leaders appeared hopeful that a bill can be approved in time for the excise cut to become effective on September 1.

FTC Upholds Record Search
In 3-to-1 Split

The Federal Trade Commission split, 3 to 1, yesterday on the issue of whether its agents had engaged in an illegal search and seizure in obtaining evidence against a Richmond (Va.) firm.

The majority upheld the FTC investigators, while Commissioner Lowell Mason declared that constitutional rights had been violated. The ruling clears the way for consideration of charges against the New Standard Publishing Co., an encyclopedia firm, and its president, Julius B. Lewis.

The argument was over a 1941 visit to the firm's office by two FTC investigating attorneys. When Lewis balked at permitting examination of the records, he was told he could be forced by a court order to produce them and that it "would be to his advantage" to permit examination without such an order. He then permitted a four-day search of files and allowed some records to be removed, testimony showed.

Commissioner William Ayers, for the FTC majority, said the only possible "threat" involved lay in the remark about a possible court order. But, said Ayers, that was hardly more than "fairly informing" Lewis of the FTC's legal authority to obtain a subpoena.

Ayers said that "to characterize such conduct as illegal search and seizure in contravention of the provisions of the Constitution . . . is to strain their meaning and fundamental purposes to the point of absurdity."

Mason said the investigators' orders "smack of the cell house" and he declared that the documents were taken in violation of the constitutional ban on unreasonable searching and seizure.

"If we countenance, while sitting as judges, the unbridled and unrestrained violation of a citizen's right of privacy by accepting the fruits of an illegal search and seizure, we in effect serve notice on our investigators that we as administrative officers approve a continuance of such acts in future cases."

The Richmond firm has been under investigation for misrepresentation and deception in the sale of its encyclopedias.

was furnished a financial statement of Commercial Home by Buckley showing that the company had a paid-in capital of $252,000 as of September 30, 1948.

"This was, of course, false," Cotter said, "as it has been indicated that the company had but $2000 in paid-in capital."

He noted that between May 11, 1949, and May 3, 1950, Paul Buckley withdrew $210,000 from the corporation, in addition to a later $8481.83 for travel and entertainment.

Drop Liquor Price Charges, FTC Examiner Urges

A Federal Trade Commission examiner has recommended that the complaint alleging Middle Atlantic Distributors, Inc., has allegedly attempted to maintain a uniform retail price policy be dismissed, it was learned yesterday.

The recommendation of the trial examiner, William L. Pack, is not binding on the commission, and the commission has not acted upon the proposal.

The company, 1125 2d st. n.e., had been charged by the FTC with illegal price practices because of its products sold at retail at uniform prices.

The examiner said following a hearing that there was not sufficient "reliable, probative and substantial evidence" to support a legal case.

The company is the exclusive distributor in the District of Columbia and the District of Columbia Club and Imperial whiskies.

Strike on Western Railroads Shows No Sign of Settlement

Chicago, June 26 (AP).—Operations of four major Western railroads remained at a standstill tonight at the end of the second day of a strike of 4000 AFL switchmen.

Spokesmen for the union and the railroads said there was nothing to indicate that the strike might be settled soon.

Lines idled by the walkout Sunday morning of the Switchmen's Union of North America are the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific, the Chicago Great Western, the Western Pacific and the Denver & Rio Grande Western.

The Great Northern Railroad, also involved in the strike, said that thus far it has been able to maintain near-normal passenger service, although its freight service has been crippled.

The switchmen are demanding a 40-hour week with 48 hours' pay, equal to a boost of 31 cents an hour. They rejected an emergency fact-finding board's recommendation that they be granted a 40-hour week and a pay boost of 18 cents an hour.

Arthur J. Glover, switchmen's union president, today repeated a statement he had previously made that he is "ready to sit down with anybody, anywhere, if they are ready to bargain in good faith."

The National (Railway) Mediation Board, which had sought unsuccessfully to avert the strike, was in Chicago, but apparently was making little progress in efforts to settle the dispute.

Francis A. O'Neill, board chairman, said three other rail unions involved in wage-and-hour dispute have agreed to accept the board's services.

O'Neill said conferences with the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, Order of Railroad Conductors and the AFL Railroad Yardmasters of America will begin Tuesday.

These three unions also have expressed dissatisfaction with recommendations of a fact-finding panel for settlement of their disputes.

The trainmen and conductors become legally free to strike after July 15. The yardmasters, like the switchmen, already have fulfilled legal strike requirements and are free to strike any time.

In Chicago, between 30,000 and 35,000 daily commuters who use the Rock Island suburban service had to scurry for other transportation to get to work this morning.

Better A-Weapons,
Dean Tells AMA

San Francisco, June 22 (AP).—The United States is emphasizing the manufacture of "more and better atomic weapons," the American Medical Association learned here today.

Atomic Energy Commissioner Gordon Dean told the AMA convention "We would not be in this business if there were any evidence from across the water of an effort to secure a working, lasting peace."

"Our great stocks of fissionable material now fabricated into weapons can be readily turned to peacetime uses when we know, not by false words but by affirmative action, that peace is really wanted," Dean said.

The AMA House of Delegates heard a report on the planned campaign against compulsory health insurance. Contemplated advertising schedules allocate $500,000 to be spent in some 11,000 daily and weekly newspapers, $300,000 for radio time and $250,000 on national magazine advertisements, all during the week of October 8-14.

being sought in connection with last week's gun battle at the American Enka rayon mill, officials reported today.

Four persons were wounded in the shooting. Sheriff Robert Medlin revealed the new arrests and said four men identified as "leaders" of the battle and others believed to have joined in the violence were being hunted. He declined to reveal their names.

Peace talks in the long and bitter strike broke down after an all-night meeting in New York of representatives of Enka, the CIO union and Federal mediators. No further negotiations were scheduled.

Tidal Oil Bill Ready for House

A bill to give the States ownership of lands beneath the marginal seas was cleared for House action yesterday.

The House Rules Committee adopted a procedure calling for four hours' general debate and permitting amendments to be offered from the floor.

Speaker Rayburn (D., Tex.) said later that he did not know when the bill would be taken up in the House.

Chairman Sabath (D., Ill.) of the Rules Committee said it had cleared the bill for House debate over his protest.

"It won't mean anything," he said. "The President has vetoed it (the bill) and will veto it again. It will just be a waste of time."

The legislation would give the States ownership and control of the so-called oil-rich tidelands despite Supreme Court opinions that the Federal Government has a paramount right to the oil and other minerals under the marginal seas off the coastal States.

The court ruled first in the California case four years ago and reaffirmed its position only a month ago in the cases of Louisiana and Texas.

Congress first passed a State-ownership bill while the California case was pending in the courts. The President vetoed it. Two years ago the House passed a second bill to surrender the lands to the States, but it died in a Senate committee.

Premier Post Is Rejected By Queuille

Paris, June 26 (AP)—President Vincent Auriol, described by his aides as "greatly disturbed" at the outbreak of war in Korea, today to seek a swift end to the government crisis.

Queuille

He told Queuille the international situation has become "disturbing" as a result of the Korean fighting, informants said. France has vital interests in Indo-China, Queuille replied that disagreements between France's warring middle-of-the-road political parties were too great for him to accept the offer of the premiership. But he agreed to accept a "mission of information"—that is to say, to confer with party leaders to enable him to size up the chances of forming a new cabinet.

Queuille headed a coalition of Radical Socialists, Socialists, Catholic Popular Republicans (MRP) and Moderate Rightists from September, 1948, to October, 1949, that set a stability record among postwar French governments.

It was followed by Georges Bidault's coalition which collapsed Saturday over wage increases for government workers. The Socialists insisted on the pay increases, but Bidault said the French budget could not stand them.

More Catholic Aides Jailed In Hungary

Vatican City, June 26 (AP)—The Vatican radio said today that nearly 1000 priests, monks and nuns were rounded up in Budapest June 9 and transported to concentration points.

The Vatican speaker said secret police of the Communists regime, which recently intensified its measures against the Catholic Church in Hungary, raided monasteries and convents during the night.

They rounded up 322 priests and monks—including 90 Jesuits—and 600 nuns.

Two weeks ago Josef Reval, Minister of People's Education in Hungary, climaxed a bitter campaign of radio and press attacks against Roman Catholic clergy by calling them "imperialist agitators and reactionary newsmongers."

Last Thursday, dispatches from Budapest announced that the bench of Roman Catholic bishops in Hungary—whose primate, Josef Cardinal Mindszenty, has been imprisoned for life for treason—had asked the government for an official review of "church questions."

That was interpreted as a church surrender to the long state campaign against it.

At that time, Hungarian officials blasted as false stories abroad that monks and nuns had been transferred to concentration camps. There are 63 religious orders in Hungary, with about 11,000 monks and nuns in 636 cloisters and monasteries.

The latest Hungarian attacks on the church were pegged on the refusal of the Catholic clergy to sign the Communist petitions calling for outlawing the atom bomb.

Bus-Truck Crash Kills 16

Cagliari, Sardinia, June 26 (AP)—Sixteen men were killed today when a truck filled with sand collided with their small bus, overturned on top of it and smashed it flat.

Eden Calls Labor Stand on Pool Plan a Blow to West

London, June 26 (AP)—Anthony Eden accused the Labor government today of weakening the Western front against communism by its refusal to join the Paris talks on the Schuman Plan.

"In all its dreams of wedgedriving, Russia could hope for nothing better than the reduction of Britain to the status of observer in Franco-German relations," the deputy Conservative leader told Commons.

He said the outbreak of fighting in Korea emphasized the urgent need for teamwork in the anti-Communist world.

Sir Stafford Cripps, Chancellor of the Exchequer, replied that the government was exercising proper caution toward the plan for pooling Europe's coal and steel.

"We could not enter lightly upon any scheme or plan which might affect profoundly our coal and steel industries," Cripps declared.

Government Tenure at Stake He insisted it is better for Britain not to take part in the talks "for the time being" than to get into a position where later it might be charged with "wrecking the negotiations by our refusal to agree to the principle upon which they had been launched."

Eden and Cripps were the first speakers in a two-day Schuman Plan debate. Prime Minister Attlee has staked the existence of his Labor government on winning a vote of confidence when the debate ends Tuesday night.

In the event of a defeat, he is expected to ask for a new national election. If Labor keeps its narrow majority of eight votes solid, however, the government should win.

MacArthur Gives S. Korea 10 Mustangs

Tokyo, Tuesday, June 27 (AP)—General MacArthur's headquarters today said loading of war material for South Korea has begun. Korean pilots have arrived to take delivery of 10 American fighter planes.

Headquarters announced yesterday that the United States had authorized transfer of 10 F-51 Mustang fighters for the aviation-short Korean republic. It also announced air and naval escort will be supplied to assure safe arrival of war-aid shipments to South Korea.

Korean Pilots in Japan Today's announcement said: "Korean fighter pilots have arrived at a southern Japan air base to fly to Korea the 10 fighter airplanes authorized for the Korean republic. General headquarters has not received information as to when the airplanes will be ready to take off for Korea."

Plans were put into effect immediately for the movement of ammunition and supplies from Japan to Korea upon receipt of orders from Washington, and loading operations were begun as soon as ships were made available.

Whether shipments of supplies to the little United States-sponsored republic already had started moving was not disclosed officially. There was no indication whether other aircraft also would be supplied the hard-pressed little republic's fledgling air force, which has only a few tiny liaison and training planes.

Air Protection Set An American air umbrella already was spread between Japan and Korea. Serious young jet pilots set it up today to cover the evacuation of two shiploads of American service dependents from Korea to Japan.

Naval convoys likewise began today. American destroyers were at sea to escort the two evacuee ships after they left Inchon, west coast port 18 miles from the menaced south Korean capital of Seoul. The ships were going to Japan.

Authoritative sources said continuous air cover would be maintained to assure safe passage of "munitions and war materiel" from Japan to South Korea.

The air cover will be mostly fast Lockheed F-80 jet fighters but will include also some F-83 twin-fuselage Mustang fighters, these sources said.

Report Slated In 'One Package' Charity Fund Plan

Subcommittee recommendations on a "one-package" charity fund drive in the Washington area will be presented to the full Citizens Interim Committee at 10:30 a. m. Thursday.

The formal report on proposals to end multiple fund campaigns here will take place in the board room of Riggs National Bank, 15th st. and Pennsylvania ave. n.w.

The subcommittee met yesterday with representatives of the major independent campaign appeals, but Chairman Frank J. Luchs declined to comment on the conference discussion.

Egypt Grants Divorce To U. S. Military Aide

Cairo, Egypt, June 26 (AP)—Judge Mustafa Riad Bey granted Col. Norman E. Fiske, of Washington, D. C., United States military attaché to Egypt, a divorce today.

It was the first divorce ever granted to an American by a purely Egyptian court. Col. Fiske charged Mrs. Helen Dill Fiske of San Francisco with desertion. Judge Riad ordered Mrs. Fiske to pay all court costs of the action.

Eden moved the adoption of a policy so far followed by Attlee—approval of the French initiative in proposing the plan, refusal of entangling commitments to it in advance.

Eden said "The news from Korea urges the need for all free countries, East and West, to align themselves and their policies and agree on their plans without delay."

"Certainly no event could give the more confidence for the present or future than to find a practical means to reduce and finally to eliminate the possibility of future war between France and Germany."

He predicted that failure to realize the Schuman Plan would bring a "return to the narrowest form of European nationalism with far-reaching repercussions upon the security and defense of western Europe."

He said the outbreak of fighting in Korea emphasized the urgent need for teamwork in the anti-Communist world.

Defenders' Position Held 'Not Hopeless'

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

An American Army spokesman said last night that the military situation in Korea is "not hopeless," but he would not go further in predicting the outcome of the war.

Speaking at a press "briefing" held to clarify the rather confused picture of the fighting, the official noted that South Korea has much "good defensive country"—deep valleys and mountains—and that a stand is possible "if the will to fight exists."

Shipment of American weapons to Korea "is in the hands of General MacArthur," it was said, and is not limited by the funds and requirements of the Mutual Defense Assistance Program. MacArthur is authorized by "operational necessity" to send the South Korean forces what they are able to use from among a "great deal of equipment" on hand in Japan, said the spokesman.

The Army evaluation of the war situation was based on official intelligence dispatches received up to 4 p. m. EDT. Any definite prediction at this stage, said the spokesman, would be a crystal ball guess because the military situation is still very fluid.

He said that "Ascom City"—the American Army Service Command depot halfway between Seoul and its port Incheon—had been attacked by a small force of some 500 North Koreans. Another small force attacked Kimp'o Airfield, 20 miles west of Seoul.

It is not yet clear whether they were landed from the sea or are the spearhead of another column of troops pressing down from the north on the other side of the mountains from the main thrust against the South Korean capital. Presumably, said the spokesman, neither the airfield nor the depot has yet been captured and the attack may be just a raid. However, this could be a definite threat that might sever connections between Seoul and Incheon.

A total of 622 American dependents have been evacuated from the latter port aboard Norwegian and Panama vessels in the harbor. It was said. If Incheon is captured or cut off, the remaining 300 to 400 dependents will have to go out by air or by ship from Pusan in the South, declared the spokesman.

There are 800 civilian officials and 500 military personnel serving as members of the American Korean Mission. The Army officers and men largely are scattered throughout the Korean military forces—down to the battalion level—serving as "operational" as well as technical advisers to the Korean command. There have been no reports of American casualties, the Army official said.

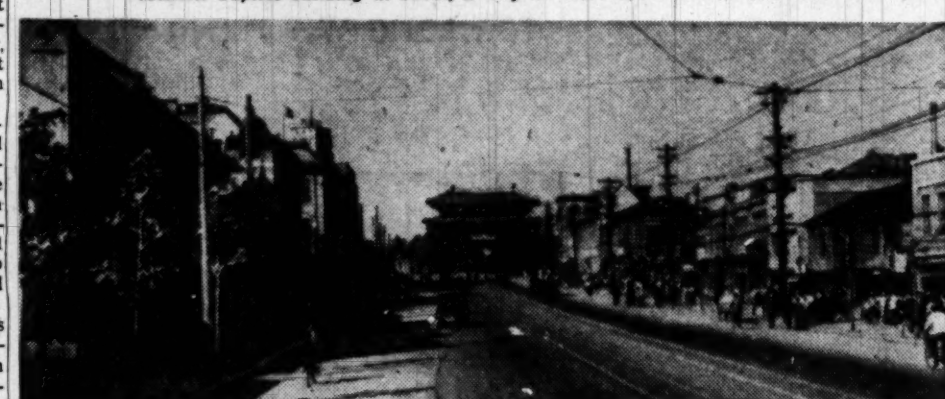

The armies are about the same size—95,000 men in the North Korean forces and 96,000 in the South Korean military establishment. About 38,000 troops of the attacker and some 25,000 of the defense have been in action to date.

North Koreans largely are armed with captured Japanese weapons: 7.6 mm. rifles, 75-mm. mountain pack and 105-mm. artillery, 15-ton light and 25-ton medium Jap tanks. They also have some 122-mm. Russian artillery, and a small tactical air force including USSR Yaks, armed with 20-mm. cannon.

N. H.) and several other Republican Senators suggested the time has come to lay down a line beyond which Red forces could not penetrate without provoking war with the United States.

3. The charge that the United States was caught "flat-footed" followed close questioning of Defense Secretary Louis Johnson and Secretary Dean Acheson by the Senate Appropriations Committee. The charge was aired by several Senators on both sides of the aisle.

Expected, Says Hillenkoetter

4. Rear Admiral Roscoe H. Hillenkoetter, director of the Central Intelligence Agency, said at the White House, however, that the Sunday morning attack had been expected for a year. Said Hillenkoetter: "The capabilities were there for a year anyway."

United Nations.

The possibility of war was openly discussed on the floor by Senator Connally after a series of speeches on United States alternatives from both sides of the aisle.

Connally said the matter of an "armed stand" was being considered, but the President "does not want to take a course which will involve the people of the United States in armed aggression or in war until all aspects of the matter have been considered by him."

Warns Against Undue Alarm

He told Senators, however, not to get "unduly alarmed."

"The President is not going to sell out the interests of the United States or its people," he said. "He is not going to tremble like a psychopath before the Russian power. He is not going to surrender our rights or the rights of free peoples."

Connally assured Republican Senators they will be kept informed on developments and will have "just as much voice and just as much influence" as Democratic Senators in any decisions that are reached.

Speeches by Senator Bridges and William F. Knowland (R., Calif.) touched off Connally's remarks.

Bridges told the Senate it is not enough to bring "moral pressure" on Russia.

"I realize it is politically smart to back away from international incidents, from situations which may lead to the loss of American lives," said the New Hampshire Republican. "But let us be completely honest."

be saved by abject surrender to the pressures of international communism any more than they were at Munich 12 years ago. Appeasement then, as now, is but surrender on the installment plan."

Partisanship Abjured

Senator Herbert H. Lehman (D., N. Y.) appealed to the Senate to "avoid partisanship as evil itself."

"There are times for greatness," he said. "This is such a time."

Let us adhere to the means offered us by the United States. Let us exhaust every resource to keep the world from the calamity of war."

When Connally similarly suggested the United States take counsel with the United Nations, Knowland asked if he thought North Korean troops would be stopped "merely by a resolution of the United Nations."

"No, I have not said that," said Connally. "If it takes more than resolutions, the United Nations can take action beyond resolutions."

Knowland replied that Russia might return to the Security Council just long enough to veto any actions. Connally replied that other nations might do a little vetoing themselves.

Suggests Alternative

"If the United Nations cannot act they might together pursue a course over and above the powers of the United Nations," said the Texan.

"The freedom-loving people of the world might agree among themselves that we shall not permit this palpable breach of the peace, this palpable attack, without provocation and without justification."

He asked Knowland if that wasn't a possibility. When Knowland nodded, without rising, Connally chafed at what he said was a "discrepancy." In the flare-up that followed, each Senator challenged the other's contribution to bi-partisan foreign policy. Later both apologized and the debate went on.

Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) asked Connally if our Government had any commitments with South Korea "in case of attack."

U. S. Likely to Ask U. N. for Sanctions

tion the commission is convinced North Korea will not heed the Council resolution nor accept the UNCOCK (U. N. Commission on Korea) good offices. Suggest have the Council give consideration either to an invitation to both parties agree on a neutral mediator either to negotiate peace or requesting member governments to undertake immediate mediation. Commission decided stand by in Seoul. Danger is that critical operations now in progress may end in a matter of days and question of cease fire and withdrawal of North Korean forces suggested by Council resolution prove academic."

In another message, the commission pointed out that all efforts to contact the North during the last 18 months had met only negative response.

The commission also transmitted to Lie an appeal from the National Assembly of the Republic of Korea for immediate and effective steps to secure peace and security for Korea and the world.

The assembly told Lie the North Korean Communist army began armed aggression early on June 25 and that the Republic's army was acting in defense operations.

Acting swiftly at the request of the United Nations, the Council issued its order yesterday. The Russians were not present, continuing the boycott they began in January against the presence of the Nationalist Chinese. But the Russians never have accepted U. N. decisions on Korea, and several delegates said the Soviet absence saved many hours of debate capped by a Russian veto.

Gross indicated after the Council meeting that sanctions would be the next step if the North Koreans did not comply. The question now is how strong does the U. N. want to make those sanctions.

Article 41 of the U. N. Charter provides that the Council may decide on measures short of the use of armed force and call on U. N. members to observe them. These could be complete or partial interruption of economic relations and of rail, sea, air, postal, telegraphic, radio and other means of communication, and the severance of diplomatic relations.

If those do not work, Article 42 says the Council may take such action by air, sea, or land forces as necessary to restore peace. This action may include demonstrations, blockade and other operations by air, sea or land forces of members in the U. N.

The Charter provides that the U. N. establish an international army but that never has been done.

U. N.'s Korea Decision Invalid, Moscow Says

London (Tuesday) June 27 (U.P.)—Moscow said today that the United Nations resolution ordering the north Korean Communists to stop their invasion "has no force" because neither Russia nor Communist China was represented at the meeting.

The United States invasion resolution, which the U. N. Security Council approved at an emergency meeting Sunday, was based on a false version of the conflict, Moscow said.

Russia's first comment came in the form of a dispatch, datelined New York, by the Soviet official news agency Tass broadcast from Moscow and recorded by the Soviet monitor.

Boost Atlantic Pact Defense, Envoy Asks

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The gravity of the danger to the world posed by Russia has not been made sufficiently clear to the American people, and their efforts to meet it are not adequate, according to former Senator John S. Cooper (R., Ky.).

In an informal interview yesterday the Republican adviser to Secretary of State Dean Acheson at the London defense meeting last month declared one fact that clearly emerged from those conferences was that the North Atlantic Pact defense effort must be increased.

It is equally clear, Cooper said, that present American plans do not contemplate an increase. The enlarged program needed, he added, must come principally from American funds and resources.

Cooper stressed repeatedly that he had no partisan purpose in his remarks, and that he supported fully the Administration's aims and purposes in its foreign policy. But, he said, he felt the Administration had an obligation to go to Congress and the American people to explain the need for larger defense authorizations.

Calls Red Scare Wasteful
Similarly, he said, the Republicans must realize it is the responsibility of Congress to meet the danger, and attention on issues such as "communism in the State Department," which are not the "real issues," is a wasteful diversion.

His reference was to the current campaign of Senator McCarthy (R., Mich.), which is backed to considerable extent by many Republican Senators and elements in the GOP machine.

That side issue should be resolved, he said, by presidential appointment of a commission, perhaps three men, about whose in-

Tydings Predicts Compromise Draft Bill Ready by Week's End

House and Senate conferees on the draft extensions bill yesterday failed to reach agreement in their first meeting, but Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.), of the House Armed Services Committee reported "considerable progress."

Sen. Leverett Saltonstall (R., Mass.), also was encouraged. Vinson said they will meet again today.

Despite sharp differences between the House and Senate, Chairman Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.), of the Senate Armed Services Committee predicted a compromise draft bill would be worked out by the week's end.

Representative Dewey Short (R., Mo.) said the Korean war was discussed by the draft conferees, but no conclusions were reached.

Both draft-bill versions call for the registration and classification of men 18 through 25 for a possible 21-month military service.

Under the House bill, only Congress could order inductions. The Senate bill would give the President that right when Congress was not in session. The Senate bill would run three years, the House bill two.

Vinson voiced fear that if the Senate plan were approved, the President would order inductions as a club to spur voluntary enlistments.

Hayes said that from their inception the antitrust laws "have been in substance toothless as far as providing penalties that would effectively deter businessmen from attempting monopoly."

Chairman Patman (D., Texas) said the committee is particularly anxious to find out the extent to which small business suffers from (1) refusal of large producers controlling major sources of supply to sell freely, (2) the exercise of geographical and quantity price discriminations by large, monopolistic enterprises, and (3) the policy of large concerns in buying up small and medium-sized competitors who seek to get established by competing on price and quality.

"It is the committee's expectation and desire that, as a result of this investigation and these hearings, the Federal Trade Commission will be strengthened and will become a more effective agency in the enforcement and administration of our antitrust laws," Patman said.

Another witness, Watson Rogers, president of the National Food Brokers Association, urged vigorous enforcement of the Robinson-Patman anti-price-discrimination act.

Rogers, who said his association is composed of independent local sales representatives, declared the Federal Trade Commission and the Department of Justice should work in close cooperation with a view to imposing criminal penalties under the act.

Bradley Asks All Possible Cooperation

Gen. Omar Bradley yesterday said the present state of world affairs requires the closest possible cooperation between the Nation's military men and its diplomats.

"In peace," Bradley said, "the diplomat would be the principal spokesman for the American people in foreign affairs. In war, the soldier's advice is sought and heeded as we defend our Nation."

"But today, in this half peace, half war, neither the soldier nor the diplomat alone can lead the American people in a wise course of international action. Both voices must be heard if American policy is to be realistic and effective."

Speaking at graduation exercises of the National War College, Bradley said that while new weapons present a deterrent to aggression, "they also place in the hands of any enemy the quick trigger of foreign policy." He added: "Some nations can commit themselves in a matter of seconds."

Europe Is Alarmed By Korea Invasion

London, June 26 (U.P.)—Europe received the news of fighting in Korea with growing dread tonight. Many feared it was the forerunner of a third world war that might bring a searing atomic struggle for the whole world.

Korea was compared to the Spanish civil war, the Manchurian invasion by Japan, or Hitler's march into the Rhineland, events now widely interpreted as preludes to World War II.

A Conservative member of Britain's Parliament asked the government to seek United Nations approval of the use of an atomic bomb on Pyongyang, the capital of Communist-led North Korea.

A Conservative spokesman told reporters later that Peter Roberts' question in no way represented the views of the party.

Laborites shouted a shocked "oh" at Roberts' suggestion, and the speaker ruled it was out of order.

Stocks Drop Sharply

Stock exchanges in London and Paris plummeted sharply on the Korean news.

Prime Minister Attlee said Britain was "deeply concerned" at the outbreak in Korea. He welcomed the United Nations resolution demanding a cease-fire and a Communist retreat, and expressed "earnest hope" that all concerned would comply.

French and Indo-Chinese officials at Saigon, who have a Communist guerrilla war within the borders, were frankly worried. They were eager to see how stiff a stand the United States will take. Some officials said it is now more urgent than ever that American aid be rushed to Indo-China before the attack is repeated there.

Iran, on Russia's southern border, put a tough anti-Communist army boss, Lieut. Gen. Ali Razmara, in as premier-designate less than 24 hours after the attack on southern Korea. Diplomats at Cairo said the move appears to line Iran up squarely with the United States and the West.

Germans Gravely Concerned
Millions of Germans viewed the Korean conflict as a bigger test of American determination and prestige than even the airlift across Russia's year-long blockade of Berlin. West Germans saw a "growing likeness" between divided Germany and divided Korea, where American troops withdrew from their southern occupation zone after Russia set up a strong northern armed force.

Der Abend, anti-Communist paper in Berlin, said, "This is not a fight for North Korea against South Korea. This is a battle of the Kremlin against the peaceful Western world, above all, against the United States of America. Everybody understands that."

Most of the non-Communist press of Europe saw a Russian design behind the invasion of southern Korea.

Communist papers took the Moscow line—the southern Koreans were the aggressors who struck across the thirty-eighth parallel and were thrown back over their own border by a justified counter-attack.

Some of the Communist papers pictured John Foster Dulles, Republican adviser in the State Department, as the villain. One paper, the Tagblatt in Vienna, even said he had ordered the attack while on his just-concluded visit to Korea, in order to provoke fighting that would serve as an excuse for America's armed intervention in the Far East.

Burmese government officials in Rangoon said peace was dangerously jeopardized in all Southeast Asia, and expressed the view that future repercussions in the area were likely. They said the Korean issue was a test case for the Security Council.

Reds, Hungarians Train for 'Attack From Yugoslavia'

Vienna, Austria, June 26 (U.P.)—Russian troops and Hungarian soldiers will hold maneuvers next month against "a foreign power invading Hungary from Yugoslavia," reliable Western sources said today.

Only last Friday, Yugoslavia reported that Bulgarian troops, in full battle dress and supported by armored vehicles, had been moving in the past month toward the eastern frontier of Yugoslavia.

This report came from Tanjug, official news agency, which speaks for Premier Marshal Tito's government, just a week before the second anniversary of the Russian-sponsored Cominform denunciation of Yugoslavia's "independent policies."

Present U. S. Policy Bars Sending Troops

demonstrated by the cooperative action of American personnel in Korea, as well as by steps taken to expedite and augment assistance of the type being furnished under the mutual defense assistance program.

"Those responsible for this act of aggression must realize how seriously the Government of the United States views such threats to the peace of the world. Willful disregard of the obligation to keep the peace cannot be tolerated by nations that support the United Nations Charter."

Desire to Temporarily Show

Behind these strong words was an evident desire to temporize until the U. N. had acted, and until the President himself had made up his mind about the enormous issues raised by the Korean invasion. The President canceled all appointments yesterday except those dealing with the Korean crisis.

Senate Unit Gives Vote of Approval To Judge Solomon

The Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday approved the nomination of Gus J. Solomon of Portland, Ore., to be United States District Judge for the State.

A Democrat, Solomon has the endorsement of both of Oregon's Republican Senators, Wayne L. Morse and Guy Cordon.

The committee had delayed action on the nomination after a law clerk in Solomon's court accused him of Communist associations. Solomon vigorously denied the charges, however, and the clerk later conceded that he considered the judge to be a "good, loyal American."

Solomon had been serving under a recess appointment.

The committee also approved Austin L. Staley of Pittsburgh to be a judge of the Third Circuit Court of Appeals. He would succeed the late Judge John J. O'Connell of Pittsburgh.

Carrick H. Buck to be first judge of the First Circuit Court of Hawaii, a reappointment.

Census 'Peepers' Fined

Indianapolis, June 26 (U.P.)—Ralph Albertson, 25, a census taker, was convicted today of peeping while he was counting. He was given 30 days in jail and was fined $50. Testimony in Municipal Court was that he was caught peeping into a bathroom. The jail sentence was suspended.

and imposed a strict no-talk rule on all his subordinates, from Cabinet officers down.

In the afternoon the President and Secretary Acheson heard a dramatic appeal for help at the White House from Korean Ambassador John M. Chang. According to Press Secretary Charles G. Ross, the President assured his visitor that "everything possible is being done."

The Ambassador said the situation in his country was "getting very critical," but he also told reporters: "We don't want American soldiers. We will do all the fighting and the dying—but we have to have something to fight with in time."

Issues a Statement

In a formal statement, the Ambassador said: "Though the hour is late, and the forces of the enemy may even now be in our capital, I am confident that the people of the United States—indeed, that the people of the whole world—feel a deep sympathy for my country, and I am filled with hope that the United States will assist us in this hour of crisis."

"The military assistance program for Korea has been authorized by Congress and signed by the President of the United States, but I am sorry to say that none of it has reached Korea to date—at the time when we need it most. This factor of time is vital."

"It is the realization of most of the people of the United States, I feel sure, that the help which this country can give Korea at this time is help toward averting a world tragedy, and that its result will mean as much to Americans and the rest of the democratic world as to Koreans. Thus, we plead for help not only in the name of friendship, but we urge this country to join us in taking a firm stand against the common enemy of all democracy."

In saying that no weapons had yet reached Korea, the Ambassador touched off a controversy that left officials of the State and Defense Departments embarrassed and unwilling to talk.

The published facts are that although the military aid bill was passed last fall, giving Korea approximately 10 million dollars' worth of aid, the agreement with the Korean government was not signed until January 26. Weeks went by thereafter while officials here decided what weapons and supplies could be spared and shipped.

There is reason to believe—although no official would acknowledge it—that western Europe had high priority over Korea in recent months. Nobody in authority would say yesterday whether any arms had actually been shipped from here, but nobody cared to deny Chang's statement that no arms had been received in Korea.

State Department officials for some guns and tanks," he said. "We time that the need of help was imminent."

"We knew the north Koreans," he said he would leave it to reporters' judgment whether Russians took part in the invasion.

How Mild Can a Cigarette Be?

NOTED THROAT SPECIALISTS REPORT ON 30-DAY TEST OF CAMEL SMOKERS

NOT ONE SINGLE CASE OF THROAT IRRITATION DUE TO SMOKING CAMELS!

Noted doctors report findings in coast-to-coast smoking test! In this test, hundreds of men and women smoked only Camels for 30 days... averaging 1 to 2 packs per day! The throat of every smoker was examined each week—a total of 2,470 examinations. The doctors reported... NOT ONE SINGLE CASE OF THROAT IRRITATION DUE TO SMOKING CAMELS!

Smokers Prove Camel Mildness for Themselves—Make 30-Day Test in Their Own "T-Zones!" (T for Throat, T for Taste)

It's revealing to have the doctors' word on smoking Camels. But it's even more convincing to make your own Camel Mildness Test. It's the one cigarette test that's really sensible... it's the proper test... it's the 30-Day Test! Pack after pack of Camels—and only Camels—for 30 days.

No tricks—no short cuts—no snap judgments based on one puff or one sniff. Not just a one-time, one-inhale comparison. Instead, Camel asks you to test them as your steady smoke. Judge Camel mildness and the flavor of Camel's choice tobaccos in your "T-Zone"—the best possible proving ground for a cigarette. Yes, give Camels a real 30-day tryout. See if your own Camel Mildness Test doesn't add up to the most smoking enjoyment you've ever had from any cigarette!

MORE DOCTORS SMOKE CAMELS than any other cigarette

This fact was disclosed in a nationwide survey, made of doctors in every branch of medicine and in every State in the Union. 113,597 doctors were asked this question... "What cigarette do you smoke, Doctor?" The brand named most was Camel!

Boston Red Sox Pitching Ace
Speaks Up—Top winner in the majors last season, left-hander Mel Parnell declares, "I'm certainly glad I made that Camel 30-Day Mildness Test! I found Camels agree with my throat. And they're a great-tasting smoke. Camels for me—for keeps!"

Cross-Section, U.S.A.

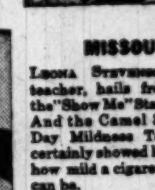

NEW YORK
PATRICIA SCANLON, part New York secretary, says: "A secretary, too, has to think of her throat. I've changed to Camels! They're a real pleasure to smoke."

MARY MORAN
Law woman, who makes championship golf courses look easy, says: "I tried the 30-Day Mildness Test. Camels are the mildest cigarette I ever smoked."

HOLLYWOOD
MANDO LANZA, singing star: "I'm constantly using my voice. My cigarette must agree with my throat. I tried many brands to find a mild one. Now I have it—Camels!"

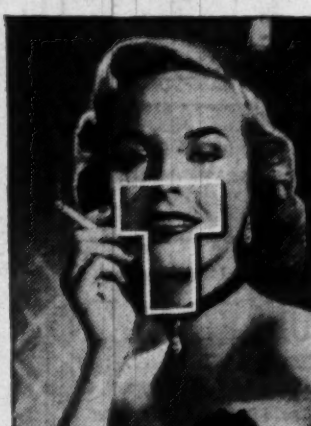

MISSOURI
LUCINA STEVENSON, teacher, tells from the "Show Me" State: "And the Camel 30-Day Mildness Test certainly showed her how mild a cigarette can be."

For the sake of your own smoking enjoyment, make the sensible test—the one you can rely on to give you the real answer—the one that lets you prove for yourself how mild a cigarette can be.

Make your own

North Korean Forces Enter Seoul; U. S. Downs Red Plane

The Associated Press reported that President Syngman Rhee and the entire South Korean Cabinet left Seoul early today. A broadcast said they had gone to Suwon, 20 miles to the south. United States Ambassador John Muccio plans to remain in South Korea, but will move southward later today. Editor's note.

James said that three North Korean fighter-bomber planes dropped light loads of bombs in the outskirts of Seoul this morning. Thanks to the protection MacArthur's fighters had given, six transport planes had been able to take off from the Kimpo Airport between 180 and 190 Americans.

(Diplomatic sources in Washington reported fighting in progress at Ascom, 10 miles southwest of Seoul—indicating a threat that the city might soon be outflanked.) A spokesman for President Rhee said today that American aid "is too little and too late."

The spokesman, Clarence Rhee, public information officer, said President Rhee "is greatly disappointed with American aid."

"As late as it is, it is very difficult to save anything," the information officer said in a broadcast. "We have nothing to stop the North Korean gang's tanks... although our soldiers are very brave. They sacrifice themselves to attack the tanks.

"Korea is very hard up because aid was slow in coming. It's too little and too late."

Evacuation of American women and children was all but completed. The United States Embassy and military mission burned their codes and secret documents. United States Ambassador John J. Muccio may remain here.

The city was quiet this morning, but confusion was mounting. Communications were tangled. Most telephone calls to official quarters went unanswered.

North Abandons Pretense
As the Communists ground their way southward behind their tanks and big guns, the North Korean leaders abandoned all pretense that—as they first claimed—they were taking "defensive action" to repulse incursions across the border by the South Koreans.

"I have ordered our armies to crush South Korea's military power," Communist Premier Kim

... Evacuation of American women and children was all but completed. The United States Embassy and military mission burned their codes and secret documents. United States Ambassador John J. Muccio may remain here.

Il Sung broadcast from Pyongyang, the Communist capital. He said the South Koreans were making the country "an American colony."

For a time yesterday the Communists seemed stopped. At 11 a. m. yesterday American Ambassador Muccio broadcast a "well done" message to the South Korean army.

"I am confident that the righteous cause of liberty-loving Korean citizens of the independent Republic of Korea will prevail," Muccio said.

At 11 p. m. Muccio announced tersely: "In view of the current situation in the vicinity of Seoul, arrangements have been made to evacuate women members of the (American) mission in a southerly direction as quickly as possible. These arrangements are being carried out at the present time."

Resistance Light
Advices from the front early today said the Communists were advancing almost without resistance after smashing the Uibongju defense line.

The route from Uibongju is a traditional invasion route and evidently the Communists put all their weight into their attack on that point, defended by the South Korean Seventh Division and elements of the Second Division.

Along the rest of the front, the South Koreans were reported holding well. But the smashing of the central front threatened them with isolation.

As the situation became graver, the South Korean cabinet met in emergency session and reached its decision to flee if the Communists reached the city.

The Douglas MacArthur's headquarters in Tokyo said the Communists were using 70,000 men—four divisions of their "People's army" and three brigades of border constabulary. They are using perhaps 70 tanks, headquarters said, and good artillery, including 6-inch (150-millimeter) artillery.

Nerve War Waged
The North Korean radio kept broadcasting nerve-war propaganda, including a statement that 100 bomber planes were waiting to bomb Seoul today. There has been no indication the Communist have any bombing planes, nesses said, but dropped its auxiliary fuel tanks and took evasive action.

The only aerial activity Monday was a raid by a Communist IL-10 fighter plane on a Seoul suburb, in which six people were killed, and a reported attack by this plane on an American Air Force F-82 fighter plane that came from Tokyo to protect ships evacuating Americans. The American plane did not return the fire, witnesses said, but dropped its auxiliary fuel tanks and took evasive action.

Improving weather—brightened skies and a sun that dried the rain-soaked roads—aided the Communists in their final advance on Seoul.

The only real success reported yesterday for the South Koreans was the sinking of four Communist troop-carrying craft, of unspecified tonnage, by coast guard vessels.

and the staff consultations have made it possible for them to work out means of using their arms in common. Moreover, recent events in Europe seem to indicate a steady decline in the Communist influence within western countries, an influence which must grow rather than decline if Stalin's boys are to obtain their ends without fighting. It could be that the Politburo has given up on the idea of winning out without fighting.

But it could also be that they have goosed the Korean Communists into action as a part of the peace offensive. In the hope of seeing the United States undertake a major program of intervention in Korea in order to charge us with being aggressors.

In spite of reassuring statements from MacArthur's headquarters, there does not seem too good a chance for the South Koreans to hold out without far more foreign help than they have received.

The attack has been made by four divisions with the probable assistance of three constabulary brigades, estimated at a total of 70,000 troops. The attacking Communists also have a considerable advantage in equipment.

Dispatches from the war theater speak of the "superior" North Korean air force and at least one air raid on Seoul, but of no flying by the South Koreans. Other dispatches mention General MacArthur sending 10 Mustang fighters to Korea as items of first necessity. Even if more were sent, there is a good deal of question as to whether there are enough South Koreans trained to fly a plane.

It is pretty much the same story in other items of equipment. The North Koreans attacked with something like 70 tanks. There is no word of any South Korean tanks in action and the South Koreans probably have nine. Even if General MacArthur sent some tanks over from Japan—and there are probably not many American tanks there either—who would operate them?

The fighting opened with a massive artillery barrage which, incidentally, is a typically Russian tactic. We hear little of South Korean guns in action and the ammunition sent by General MacArthur is reported as being for small arms.

The total apparent picture is that of a well-equipped army attacking an ill-equipped one... It is not merely equipment that is needed, but also men who are trained to use the equipment, and that means aviators, soldiers, airfield maintenance men and tank repair experts.

The Russians, of course, know all this and the Korean position with regard to trained technical troops must have been one of the main considerations in permitting or pushing the Communist Koreans into making their attack. They want to see whether the American Government will actually send troops in and whether, if the American Government does, public opinion back here will support such a move.

Probably they also want to find out how much support for actual intervention there would be among the Atlantic pact nations. (Copyright, Press Features, Inc.)

Cool Weather On the Way From Chicago

A cool front from the Chicago area "with nothing in its way to stop it" will drop Washington's temperatures some time tonight.

By Wednesday, the Weather Bureau expects, temperatures may even be below the 85-degree average for this time of year.

Meantime, it will be warm again today, with a high in the upper eighties predicted.

Yesterday's high of 94 degrees, recorded at 6 p. m., made it the second hottest day of the year.

Only Saturday's 96 could top it. But the heat wasn't too noticeable because of lowered humidity. The range was from 74 percent at 12:01 a. m. to 50 percent—a comfortable summer humidity—at 5 p. m. The low was 71 degrees at 5:55 a. m.

Forecasters explained the high came unusually late in the day—it's generally reached about 3 p. m.—because of wind conditions.

During the afternoon breezes from the north and northeast held the thermometer to 90 or so. When the wind diminished, the District simply warmed up again.

Erickson Given 9000-Mile Bike Trip to D. C. 2-Year Term; Fined $30,000

New York, June 26 (AP).—Rich, dapper bookmaker Frank Erickson, who has reigned for years over a Nation-wide gambling business, went to jail today for the first time. He was sentenced to serve two years and fined $30,000, the maximum amount.

The penalty was assessed by a three-judge Special Sessions Court panel, which could have given him up to 60 years for the gambling counts to which Erickson had pleaded guilty.

Admitted boss of a $12,500,000-a-year, coast-to-coast bookmaking network, Erickson heard the sentence with his usual, poker-faced stolidism.

The portly, balding Erickson, wearing a gray suit, twirled his thumbs as the sentence was pronounced. His lifted eyebrows gave his round face a questioning expression.

"I have nothing to say," he told newsmen afterwards.

Freedom Possible in 18 Months

Erickson, who by his guilty plea had made a bid for mercy, can be freed in 18 months, if he earns full time for good behavior, Correction Department officials said.

He will serve his time in the city penitentiary on Riker's Island in the East River.

Before sentence was passed, District Attorney Frank S. Hogan appealed to the court to fine Erickson $30,000 and put him in jail for five years.

The prosecutor called the gambler "the master mechanic" in what is probably the "Nation's biggest racket," and said he has "violated the law of every State in the Union."

Defense Attorney Sol Gelb, urging clemency, said Erickson should not be made "the sacrificial offering" to ease the conscience of the public for "its own vices."

"We sometimes lose sight of the fact that bookmaking is a product of the public," he said, "and that the gambling evils stem from the weakness of the public."

Three Years Suspended
The sentence, handed down by Justices Nathan D. Perlman, Frank Oliver and John V. Flood, gave Erickson one year for the first of 59 bookmaking counts, and one year for a conspiracy count. He was given an additional three-year suspended sentence, and fined $500 on each of the 60 counts. He could have received a year in prison on each of the counts.

Gelb said Erickson, whose gambling interests netted him $100,000 yearly in profits, was now "out of business" and "never will return to that business." The attorney said he was undecided whether to appeal the sentence.

Hogan, who termed the gambler an "insider in the underworld" and a "the top man in a dirty business," said it was "unique in the history of the court" to have the head man of such an extensive gambling operation before him. Usually, he said, accused bookmakers are only minor underlings.

Hopes to Eliminate Biggies

Later, Hogan told newsmen his office has "evolved a new technique" by which it hopes to "eliminate the big bookmakers" or at least "check their activities." The system, he said, will involve use of canceled vouchers, testimony by bettors, and bookie employees. Erickson's bookmaking career, which carried him to wealth and power in the Nation's gambling circles, began 30 years ago when he quit his $3-a-week busboy's job to begin booking bets on horse races.

Last April 28, he admitted his illegal activities before a Senate subcommittee probing Nation-wide gambling. A few days later, district attorney investigators raided his Park ave. office, and seized a truckload of his records. A grand jury returned its charges against him May 31.

Erickson prevented his big money betters from being called into court as witnesses when he pleaded guilty last Monday—the day his trial was to begin.

Senate Crime Probers Tangle With Indiana Political Fight

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The Senate Crime Investigating Committee yesterday found itself in the cross-fire of an Indiana political fight over a House seat now held by Representative Madden, a Democrat.

A week ago, Paul Cyr, Republican candidate for Madden's seat at the November election, announced he had given the Senate committee information that Chicago gambling cliques had contributed some $50,000 to $100,000 to Democratic campaigns in recent elections. The Senators, headed by Chairman Kefauver (D. Tenn.), are looking into the "corrupting" influence of crime on politics.

The GOP statement brought a hot counter-blast from Madden yesterday. He said charges of vice and gambling in Lake County (Madden's district, adjoining Chicago) smelled of a "Republican smear campaign." He added he was sure the Senate committee "does not want to be a party to a political maneuver of this kind."

Madden's letter was in reply to a telegram from the Rev. Bernard Spang, chairman of the Gary (Ind.) Crime Commission, who had asked the Congressmen to urge a Senate inquiry in the Indiana county. Madden turned the correspondence over to Kefauver without recommendation.

Madden said that "Indiana Republican State politicians have used Lake County as a whipping boy and smear victim in every election for 20 years." He added he had read that the State's two Republican Senators, Jenner and Capehart, had "agreed to do everything in their power to bring Lake County into the spotlight of the fused to state when his report on the inquiry will be ready, but it may be only a matter of a few weeks, it appeared.

The report, he said, will include the full testimony, including that in closed sessions, of the Amerasia case, if his recommendation is followed. He made clear that his suggestion for release of all evidence was something the full five-man subcommittee would have to vote on.

The subcommittee, he said, has made the most complete and voluminous study of the Amerasia case ever attempted. It includes all the evidence and proceedings of previous investigations, and testimony from almost all the parties involved.

A Republican member of the subcommittee, Senator Lodge (Mass.), indicated yesterday that he would not go along with an expected majority report from the three Democratic members. Lodge, talking briefly to reporters, left an impression that he will file a separate report of his own.

Throughout the investigation Lodge has taken the position that a Senate committee is not the proper vehicle for the inquiry required, and that a special, non-Congressional nonpartisan commission should have been selected to do the job.

Curiously, however, when McCarthy first made his charges of Communist infiltration in the State Department on February 20, it was Lodge who initially proposed "to have a subcommittee of the Foreign Relations Committee take up every single one of the accusations."

Miss Coplon Denied New Trial

Former Government girl Judith Coplon, twice convicted of spying for Russia, was denied a new trial yesterday by Federal Judge Albert L. Reeves.

The jurist rejected her plea that her first conviction here was invalid because it was based on evidence illegally obtained through FBI wire-tapping activities.

The facts, he said, do not bear out the argument.

Miss Coplon, who recently married one of her attorneys, was not present. The 28-year-old former Justice Department analyst was sentenced to 40 months to 10 years in jail on the Washington conviction. She also was sentenced to up to 15 years by a New York court on similar charges.

Reeves said the FBI—which has admitted tapping the phones of Miss Coplon and her attorney—may have violated the law and committed an "ethical wrong." But he said she was entitled to a new trial only if the evidence thus obtained was used in court.

Eyes And Ears

If the State Department and Congress were not caught unprepared by the Communist invasion of South Korea, they certainly have given that impression. The State Department, of course, has the most direct responsibility in the matter, yet it is natural for members of Congress to inquire: Was the Central Intelligence Agency napping? Much as this newspaper believes that a shakeup in CIA is overdue, the responsibility for the lapse cannot be laid entirely at the intelligence agency's doorstep. Our understanding is that CIA furnished relatively good information about Communist preparedness—sufficient information, and recent enough, to place the State Department on guard. What was lacking, of course, was the all-important factor of timing. In other words, while CIA said that the Communists were prepared to attack, it did not say when.

Some time ago a strategic decision was made not to attempt to hold Korea by American arms in the event of Communist attack. This was signaled by the withdrawal of all but an American training mission. The existing plan on which we are now acting is to give Korea all possible military aid, under United Nations sanction, but to avoid any commitment of American troops. But the fact that such a plan was laid long ago in no way minimizes the confusion caused in Washington when the invasion came. For example, the military aid already authorized could have been speeded up if intelligence had been more precise. There is some pertinence to Korean President Rhee's complaint that American aid has been "too little and too late"—that there is nothing to stop the Communists tanks.

Perhaps clairvoyance is too much to expect of the CIA, though of all agencies of Government it should be the best prepared to predict what may happen. But the element of timing is essential to intelligence evaluation; and without accurate forecasts as to timing, even the best background intelligence reports run the danger of being regarded as cries of "wolf." This is particularly true when the Central Intelligence Agency is lacking in prestige. There has been so much internal politicking in CIA, so much friction with other departments of Government, that confidence is absent. The Korean tragedy merely emphasizes the imperative quality of complete intelligence—and the necessity for introducing some stability of direction to CIA. In any major attack lapse in timing could be the difference between readiness and disaster.

British Debate

Doubtless there was a shadow across the House of Commons as the members began their debate on the Schuman Plan. The shadow came from Korea. It bore the legend, "it is later than you think," and Mr. Eden, leading the attack on the government for its nonparticipation in the Schuman conference, called attention to it. It is certainly late in the day to be still haggling over the translation into action of all the brave words that have been uttered about unity in Europe since the end of the war. Five long years have lapsed since the guns ceased their evil music, yet most of the energy of the postwar years has been devoted to the rebuilding of the fragments which invited the Hitlerite aggression. Scarcely a lesson seems to have been learned, let alone the major lesson that only in unity is there strength and security.

Truly Ferrero, the Italian historian, was right when he said that the rarest thing in the world is the reconstructive mind. The task requires a blend of imagination and political engineering that has been sadly lacking in postwar Europe. Unity, to be sure, has had voluminous lip-service, from Premier Attlee no less than from other leaders of the people of Europe. It was Attlee himself who said "Federation or perish," but Mr. Attlee did not mean federation, let alone action to achieve it. This is shown by his failure to disavow the manifesto of the executive committee of the Labor Party which is summed up by the London Observer as saying, "Europe must not federate lest British socialism perish." What Premier Attlee was doing, and what so many others were doing, in their verbal approval of the cause of European unity, was, apparently, making an idle genuflection and indulging in semantic camouflage.

It may be that pretty soon unity will be forced upon Europe if not at the behest of reconstruction, then at that of rearmament. Five years is a long time to waste in making the adjustments clearly defined by what Mr. Churchill called "the ancient nationalist feuds and modern ideological factions [which] distract and infuriate the unhappy, hungry populations." It remains to be seen whether the Conservatives will force their own vote in favor of participation in the Schuman conference to an issue. Since the election make-believe has been the rule in action as well as speech. However, Mr. R. A. Butler, one of the Conservative leaders, had advocated prior to the debate the bringing together of "western Europe and the United States" into "a mighty union" with the commonwealth. The question is whether "union" means just what the Conservatives wish it to mean, like "federation" in the Attlee lexicon, or what Webster says it means.

Saving Korea

For the time being the war in Korea seems to be going badly for the Rhee government. Yet the success of the initial penetration is due to the unexpectedness of the aggression. It looks as if the Northern Koreans in aiming first at the capture of Seoul intend to claim complete sovereignty over the whole of Korea and treat the remaining operation as "mopping up." This must be regarded only as an invitation to the United Nations and the United States to expedite the steps necessary to extrude the interlopers. It is said that there is some division of opinion within the Government as to the extent of the American duty in the circumstances and that because of this division there was no communique after the ministerial conference at Blair House. Such a lack of single-mindedness is in the highest degree lamentable. If this aggression is tolerated, aggression will pile upon aggression, till the day of catastrophe; and in the meantime the United States will not have a friend left in the Far East. In Asiatic eyes the Russians have put themselves in the wrong, and there would be no hesitation in supporting a firm American policy of antiaggression.

Why, in view of this, did Soviet Russia strike? The answer can be only in the realm of surmise. But history lends support to the theory that Moscow is engaged in a test of the American intention: is the United States prepared to risk a major collision with the Soviet Union?

All through the 30s this was the game that was played along the indeterminate Mongolian-Manchurian and the Manchurian-Siberian frontiers. Japan and Russia were feeling each other out. The chief feeler was the Kwantung army of Japan, which was itching to overrun Siberia, knowing that the settlement of the feud with Russia would be highly popular in militarized Japan. Serious clashes occurred in 1937, 1938 and 1939. The 1939 incident occurred when the Japanese stormed the heights of Changkufeng, in the Manchurian-Korean-Siberian triangle. The Russians retook the position, and hostilities there were terminated in an armistice which is said to have been produced by British mediation. In 1939 the Japanese overran the other extremity of the frontier abutting upon Outer Mongolia, but again found Soviet troops ready, and had to retire. It was at this point, known in Far Eastern history as Nomonhan, that the Soviet brought a whole armored division into action. These reverses explain why Japan, realizing that the Soviet in the Far East had become too tough a nut to crack, signed a neutrality pact with Russia, so as to concentrate upon the "defenseless" United States.

What is going on now appears to be a repetition of the same sort of experiment. In these circumstances there can be only one reply. And that is that the United States will take the risk of a major collision in doing everything possible to free Southern Korea of the aggressor—provided that Korean resistance continues and that U. N. auspices can be obtained for any military intervention. The American obligation, only last week affirmed by John Foster Dulles, was stated explicitly when President Rhee visited him in October, 1948. He said that he personally would protect Korea "as I would protect the United States." There can be no hesitation when so much is at stake. In this crisis the Government must act as one, and state its determination so boldly as to leave nobody in suspense, let alone the Russians and the Koreans. Those who have been talking so loosely and so foolishly about "licking" Russia need iron now instead of hot air for the sake of world peace.

Atoms And Industry

When David E. Lillenthal writes that governmental monopoly and unnecessary secrecy are paralyzing the industrial development of atomic energy, he deserves to be listened to. As the first chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, he is fully informed as to the successes and shortcomings of the ambitious experiment to harness the atom for the people. The burden of his recent article in Collier's is that until there is vigorous competition in ideas through integral participation by private industry, progress in nonmilitary use of atomic energy will be negligible. It is an interesting if not altogether convincing argument, and incidentally, Mr. Lillenthal's expressed faith in the ability of private industry shows how grossly his position has been misrepresented by some of his detractors.

With many of Mr. Lillenthal's observations there can be no quarrel. He has a point in asserting that the process under the McMahon Act of declassifying information having industrial value "has proved hopelessly academic and unworkable." Certainly there ought to be a change in this climate; an end to the absurd cloak-and-dagger air of mystery that still hangs over this monopoly; relief from hideous complexity and increasing centralization and red tape. Mr. Lillenthal justly praises the inventive genius of American industry and the stimulus of competitive ideas. And it is true that so far the basic orientation of the Atomic Energy Commission has been in the direction of military development.

It does not follow, however, that the Mc-

Mahon Act could practically be overhauled—and Mr. Lillenthal offers no very specific suggestions—to include private industry at the basic stage of atomic development. This would be to deny the very reason for existence of the McMahon Act. Atomic energy is different; there has never been a parallel discovery of a force with so much dual potential for good and for destruction. The development was undertaken and carried through by the Government as a military project. In many ways, military and industrial development are inseparable. Congress, in an exceptionally enlightened piece of legislation, declared it to be public policy to socialize the production of atomic materials for the compelling reason that to leave it to private exploitation would be too dangerous.

This does not mean that the McMahon Act could not be amended and clarified in certain details, particularly with respect to information. But the fundamental assumption of the act is as valid today as when it was passed. What Mr. Lillenthal really is hitting at is the kind of policy that has been followed by the Government both in the virtually exclusive concentration on military applications and in the reliance on secrecy. Persons who would like to cut away the cumbersome information procedures are fearful lest they subject themselves to prosecution. Why? Because the whole emphasis has been on the hush-hush, as for example in the case of the hydrogen bomb. Inevitably the tendency in such an atmosphere is to exaggerate the admittedly great military applications of atomic energy and underplay the industrial applications as a force for peace. What is needed is not so much a change in legislation as a change in policy—starting at the White House.

Sensible Veto

It takes a good deal of courage to veto any veterans' benefit bill in an election year, but every consideration of reason and justice appears to sustain President Truman in rejecting the measure to give indirect raises to nearly 100,000 veterans in the postal service. The measure would give automatic promotions to the veterans in question on the basis of the time they spent in the armed forces even though they had no connection with the postal service before going into the military. In other words, the bill would grant a special privilege based on a fiction.

We think the President was eminently right in saying the bill was "bad" in principle. Its effect would be to promote veterans over other postal employees of similar qualifications and tenure. It would single out about one ninth of the veterans in the Federal service for a special favor. The fact that the bill would cost 163 million dollars in spite of the Postoffice Department's huge deficit and recent curtailment of service is alone enough to condemn it. Could a so-called economy-minded Congress have deliberated upon this measure? Rather, it appears to have turned its back and slipped through an inexcusable bonus for a handful of veterans in one department in the hope that its action would not be noticed. The least it can do now that its maneuver has been exposed is to let the veto stand, and we hope the Senate will have no part of the House action yesterday in overriding the veto.

Abuse Of A Right

The switchmen's strike, which has halted four Midwestern and Western railroads, is accompanied by a fog of conflicting statements. Perhaps the most serious of these is the claim of Arthur J. Glover, president of the Switchmen's Union, that no board heard the dispute in accord with the provisions of the Railway Labor Act. Technically, his statement is true. But it ignores a background of fact that puts an entirely different face on the situation. The Switchmen and the Brotherhood of Trainmen are rival unions, with the trainmen having a majority of the yardmen involved in the general controversy. In recent months both have been engaged in a drive for a 40-hour week. As neither could effect a settlement by collective bargaining, the President appointed an emergency board to examine the dispute involving the trainmen's and conductors' unions and then asked the same board to look into the switchmen's controversy. It is true that the board postponed its specific recommendations until its analyses had been completed in both disputes. In the meantime the 30 days in which the report on the switchmen's dispute was due expired. But that is obviously a fact of minor significance. The union waited until the board did make recommendations applicable to its members and then called a strike.

Nor can Mr. Glover's claim that "the major issue in this dispute is the 40-hour week" be taken at face value. The 40-hour week was the original source of controversy. But the emergency board recommended a 40-hour week and a pay increase of 18 cents an hour. The railroads have accepted that proposal. The unions had demanded the same pay for 40 hours that their members now receive for 48 hours, which would amount to an increase of 31 cents an hour. In other words, the switchmen have refused to compromise their 31-cent wage demand for 18 cents.

The tide of public opinion is bound to run heavily against any group that asserts the power to stall part of the Nation's transportation system rather than accept the recommendations of impartial experts speaking for the Government. Such arbitrary conduct has become much too common. It is breaking down public confidence in the procedures of the Railway Labor Act and strengthening the demands for compulsory arbitration of such disputes. The Brotherhood ought to realize that every time they flout the findings of a fact-finding board they bring closer the day when they will lose the right to strike in situations of this kind.

Letters To The Editor

"Arms And Recovery"

In your editorial of June 23 you give two arguments against my proposal authorizing the use by European nations of their own counterparty funds for their own defense. If your arguments were sound, I would be strongly opposed to the idea of using counterparty funds for such a purpose, but I would like to point out that I think your arguments are not well founded.

Your first argument is that the use of counterparty funds would detract from projects needed for economic recovery. But my proposal is that the funds be used for defense only if they are surplus to the needs of economic recovery. I agree heartily that there is no strong national defense without a strong economy. Your second argument is that the use of counterparty funds for defense purposes would give the Russians a propaganda tool. Surely, if we are to consider Russian propaganda when it comes to getting the West into a strong posture, we would never have ratified the North Atlantic Pact or embarked on the military assistance program. Nor, as a matter of fact, would we ever have enacted the Marshall Plan. If the course which we plan to follow is righteous and just, we should follow it and never mind what the Kremlin says.

Surely, a statesman like Mr. Schuman who produced the Schuman Plan, which is the greatest thing to come out of Europe since the end of World War II, can be trusted to decide whether a few million francs are or are not surplus to the needs of economic recovery and could be used to build up the defense of the North Atlantic area. After all, we are dealing here with free nations who are capable of meeting these issues and with satel-

Drunken Drivers

In the article in your issue of June 21, on the unsatisfactory prosecution of drunken drivers in the District you have put your finger on a situation which desperately needs more light of exposure.

The situation, I am unfortunately able to state as a result of a recent personal experience, is much worse than District officials have admitted to your reporters. Actually, drunken drivers are going scot free.

Policemen would rather not charge drunken drivers, unless homicides are involved. (If a drunken driver just ruins your car and almost kills your family that is not enough) because the required forms are too burdensome, and because our courts and the Corporation Counsel allow lawyers to postpone trials over periods of months.

Despite what your reporters have been told, the District police use no modern—or even ancient—methods of getting scientific evidence of intoxication when the defendant is arrested. In the case in which I was a complaining witness, I learned that defendant was not even asked to walk a straight line; no doctor is called in to examine the witness and give expert testimony. If the defendant wishes to give a urine specimen, he may; if he does not wish to, he is not required to.

Assistant Corporation Counsel handling these cases, or at least the one in the case with which I am particularly familiar, are so incompetent or disinterested that they do not so much as discuss the case before trial with the prosecutor in the case in

Vatican Envoy

With respect to whether or not President Truman should be represented at the Vatican, it might be proper to give an evaluation by the Protestant Summer Welles, former Undersecretary of State. In his Time for Decision, Mr. Welles calls Pope Pius XII "One of the constructive forces working for the regeneration of mankind."

He continues by stating, "The detailed and accurate knowledge of the Holy See of conditions in every part of the world, particularly in the countries of Europe, is proverbial. What is perhaps not so well recognized is the quality of statesmanship which, at least in recent years, has distinguished the Vatican's policy. Pope Pius XII possesses that quality to a high degree. I found him profoundly saddened by the future he saw shaping so inevitably, and profoundly grieved by the barbarous inhumanity in so many regions of the world."

"Fetish Of Freedom"

I found the June 21 letter by Dr. Guthrie, expatiating on his view of the "Fetish of Freedom," extremely interesting. "Freedom, as I see it," he writes, "is our human choice to say what we think is true rather than false; to do what we hold to be good rather than evil." Of course, Dr. Guthrie conveniently ignores the Post's editorial challenge to the criteria by which we are to determine what is good and what is evil; what is true and what is false. Even Dr. Guthrie's choice of words—"what we think" and "what we hold," testifies to a lack of certitude with respect to criteria.

Merely to state that the acceptance of God is an American tradition and therefore, "from this accepted fact flows our human rights," etc., does not answer the problem: it is a statement of it. Dr. Guthrie does not tell us just what kind of God is in the American tradition. I should say that the basic traditions of America stem from the philosophy and actions of men like Jefferson, Franklin, Adams, Paine and other of the founding fathers who thought much as they did. These men were Deists, who rejected the notion of a personal God. Several were Pantheists, who subscribed to a philosophy bordering on materialism.

Since the rejection of the notion of a personal God implies

Cafeteria Music

There is a growing conviction among the public that nothing can be accomplished without a background of music. We are belabored by music in streets and buses, in all theaters, regardless of what is being shown, in all sorts of dining places, even in lecture halls and department stores.

There is a threat now to install loudspeakers in some Government cafeterias. The reason given is to "stop the chatter," and because some people like music. All those opposed to such action are labeled as not liking music, a gross untruth. Adding music to cafeterias in Government buildings may give pleasure to some, but it would be decidedly annoying to others, and it is high time that the rights of the minority are respected.

High Price Of Meat

The American people are not eating enough of meat because they cannot afford to pay the high and unreasonable prices now being charged for it. Meat should hold first place on the American table, not bread, because, in reality, it is the staff of life. Our bodies are actually made of protein, and meat (amino acids) is necessary to keep the muscle tissue, nerve tissue, bone tissue and blood tissue in a healthy state of repair.

The majority of all persons past 40 suffer from a serious protein deficiency. Because of the high prices of meats, the American people are eating too many carbohydrates and fats which, in the course of time, produce disease in the body. Man is a meat-eating animal and a return to a sufficient protein diet will greatly lengthen the life of our American people.

WAR between the United States and the Soviet Union

WAR between the United States and the Soviet Union could come out of the Korean conflict. There will be forces at home and abroad pushing in that direction. Korea has long been a hot spot in a world full of high explosives.

But if this proves to be no more than another battle, and probably a lost battle, in the so-called cold war, then the peace appeal could have a noisy revival. American strength and American prestige have been spread thin in connection with the Truman-Acheson policy of containing communism everywhere.

Or, at any rate, it is spread thin in relation to the degree of American production and American energy that are being devoted to the "strength through containment" attempt. If this is not enough, then plainly the Administration should ask for more.

Such a request would not be popular in a campaign year. The Republican opposition could counter it with a demand for a reduction in American commitments; preserving our strength here at home; and, above all, inviting peace instead of war by our policy around the world. This last in particular might have an overwhelming appeal to Americans troubled and confused by conflicting voices.

The extreme Roosevelt haters blame the wartime President for inviting the Japs to get the United States into World War II. The opposition today may try to put the blame for a well-nigh hopeless cold war on President Truman.

GOP As A Peace Party

By Marquis Childs

Campaign Labeling

THE BLACK headlines announcing the Korean invasion with all its ominous potentialities produced one minor and slightly comic result that went almost unnoticed. That was to push off the front pages a piece of political news which might otherwise have caused something of a stir.

That sterling statesman from Maine, Senator Owen Brewster, whose Saturday night and a party rally in Atlantic City, N. J., as the occasion to launch a new policy line for the congressional campaigns this fall. Stated in simplest terms, it is to make the Democratic Party the war party and the Republican Party the peace party.

Such a policy line has been long and hotly debated in high GOP councils. Brewster and others have argued that the peace appeal was ready-made to fit the desires of an overwhelming majority of the American people.

The opposition has come from internationally minded Republicans such as Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts. They have pointed out that the peace appeal would in the long run be akin to isolationism, since it would be likely to encourage voters to believe that appropriations for the defense of western Europe and other steps to contain communism were inviting war.

But Brewster is a man not easily stayed once he gets an idea in his head. He told a wind-up meeting of State chairmen of 17 Eastern States and the members of the Republican National Committee that a Democratic President and a Democratic Congress "are not a good guarantee to keep us out of war."

"In my judgment," Brewster was quoted by the United Press as saying, "peace may be the one dominating issue of this campaign. It is not safe to trust our affairs to those who have had such a conspicuous lack of success in their efforts to keep us out of war. In all our lifetime we have had two Democratic Administrations and two world-wide wars. Enough is enough."

EVEN MORE significantly, National Chairman Guy George Gabrielson echoed the sentiment. He said that for half a century the Republican Party has been the party of peace.

The headlines out of Korea a few hours later made this sound a little ludicrous. They showed so clearly that the war party is located in the Communist half of the world where the will to conquest seems to know no limits. The peace party must sound like the party of capitulation.

But apart from these latest developments in Asia, which can upset all political calculations, the appeal of a "peace party" could become the most potent factor in the fall campaign. That has been clearly realized among certain Democratic as well as Republican leaders. Some of the most astute politicians around the President have been careful that the GOP would grab the peace side of the issue of peace or war. As one of them put it recently in a policy discussion: "We've got to start putting a new emphasis on the fact that all our efforts have peace as a goal. There's been too much talk of war. If the Republicans had the sense to come in out of the rain, they would have picked up the peace issue long since."

WAR between the United States and the Soviet Union could come out of the Korean conflict. There will be forces at home and abroad pushing in that direction. Korea has long been a hot spot in a world full of high explosives.

But if this proves to be no more than another battle, and probably a lost battle, in the so-called cold war, then the peace appeal could have a noisy revival. The Republican opposition could counter it with a demand for a reduction in American commitments; preserving our strength here at home; and, above all, inviting peace instead of war by our policy around the world. This last in particular might have an overwhelming appeal to Americans troubled and confused by conflicting voices.

The extreme Roosevelt haters blame the wartime President for inviting the Japs to get the United States into World War II. The opposition today may try to put the blame for a well-nigh hopeless cold war on President Truman.

Bolling Murder

I'm very sorry for Gordon C. Brown, Jr., whose murder has been confessed by a Bolling Field airman, but I'm also sorry for the men in the service. One man has left a mark on them which will take a long time for people to forget or even forgive. It is hard for some people to realize that everybody in the service isn't alike.

Korea And Japan

IN DUE course the President will no doubt wish to find out how it was possible to mount the invasion of southern Korea without—so it would appear—his receiving any information of what was coming. Even a comparatively primitive army needs time to get set, and a large number of people are bound to have been involved in the preparation of this invasion. How then did it happen that our friends in southern Korea had no one in northern Korea who alerted them, and therefore us, before the invasion started?

Even with a little advance warning, our position would have been much easier than it is. It is always difficult to restore peace and the status quo ante once an army is in motion, blood has been shed, towns have been occupied, prestige and honor are involved. But before the marching and shooting started, a diplomatic intervention with a firm warning to desist might well have succeeded. A small satellite like North Korea will not start a war in the face of warnings of the world community unless—as is surely not the case here—the great power behind it is prepared for a general war. The kind of limited and indirect aggression, which is being practiced in Korea, is most likely to succeed if it can be carried out suddenly and by surprise and can become an accomplished fact before diplomacy can intervene.

THAT IS why the inherent difficulties of our Korean commitment have been greatly aggravated, because Tokyo and Washington, whatever be the reason, were not alerted. For if the true Korean armies are to fight it out, it will be a very severe test indeed for the government we have supported in southern Korea. It will be a test not only in military competence and in equipment and in the loyalty and fighting morale of the troops but also in the popular support which the government can command.

The ability of that South Korean government to use military aid, rather than our capacity to furnish aid, is almost certain to be controlling. If the government is not knocked out by the surprise, or by subversion and conspiracy, if it fights with the weapons it has while more munitions are brought in, a sudden military decision may be avoided. If it can be avoided, then the diplomatic intervention of the members of the United Nations may still, with Soviet assistance or at least connivance, be able to keep the conflict localized, and even to subdue it.

THE TWO decisions taken by our Government, which are known as this is written, are to furnish military aid to the embattled South Koreans and to act through the United Nations. Naturally and certainly military aid must be furnished. But at the same time we have to recognize that the Korean problem is not soluble by military action in any way that would suit us. The best that military action can do—seen from our interest—is to restore the stalemate of that partitioned country. More than that, were we to engage forces sufficient to enable the South Koreans to take over North Korea, would most probably bring about active Soviet military intervention. The Russians could not be expected to accept passively the extension of American military assistance to the border of Manchuria and the maritime province.

THE DECISION to turn to the United Nations was surely the right one. This country cannot conceivably wish to become committed alone and by unilateral choice to a military enterprise on the mainland of Asia. It must wish, indeed it must have the diplomatic and moral advice and support of the leading nations of Asia and of Europe in any actions, beyond the supply of arms to the victims of the aggression. That support can be had only within the framework of the United Nations and on the terms of the Charter. For we can afford to have no illusions as to the attitude of the leading nations of Asia towards intervention on behalf of the South Korean government as such. But for their obligation in the Charter and their interest in avoiding a general conflagration, it would be hard to interest most of Asia in the fate of that Korean government.

THE KOREAN affair is certain to have an important bearing on the question of the Japanese treaty and of our own position in the Pacific. Whatever the outcome in Korea, even if the military invasion can be thrown back, the incident has demonstrated what all our responsible military leaders have always said—that distant beachheads on the Asiatic mainland are to be avoided.

If a world war broke out, the American garrisons on those distant beachheads would be lost, or they would have to be supported by an immense operation, exorbitantly expensive in American men and in American ships, which could have no decisive effect on the outcome of the war.

ON THE positive side the Korean affair argues strongly for the necessity of recognizing frankly that the complete and permanent disarmament of Japan was an error, which should be reversed as soon as the matter can be negotiated with our friends in the Pacific.

It is not possible for the United States to commit itself for an indefinite time to the defense of a disarmed Japan. All the fundamental difficulties of a Japanese peace treaty arise from the fact that Japan is absurdly too thoroughly disarmed. That is why we have to continue the occupation instead of replacing it with a guarantee and an alliance. With Japan armed, we can suppress insurrection and to repel an amphibious invasion, she would be no menace to anybody, and yet a decent and honorable peace treaty could readily be agreed to.

Senate Confirms Three AEC Reappointments

The Senate yesterday unanimously confirmed the reappointments of Gordon Dean, Thomas E. Murray and Dr. Henry D. Smyth as members of the Atomic Energy Commission.

The nomination of Acting Chairman Sumner T. Pike for a new four-year term on the commission has been held up by objections from some Republican Senators. Pike is to appear today for a hearing before Senate members of the Congressional Atomic Energy Committee.

tive before the co-op can take over the building. His modification, he said, limits the protection to apartments renting for $35 a month and less.

Alvin L. Newmeyer, chairman of a committee of Westchester tenants opposing cooperative sale of that building, said the Abernethy amendment would remove all present protection tenants have for all practical purposes.

Officials of the District Rent Administration said that of the non-hotel units in the Westchester, 57 units rent for less than $35 and 468 for more than $35 a month. Newmeyer said that reports of tenants to his committee through yesterday showed 413 opposing the co-op plan and 2 favoring it.

The House also approved and sent to the Senate bills to:

1. Continue the District child day care center program for one year. The existing law ends Friday. The Senate had voted a permanent day care program, but this was tabled by a House District subcommittee.
2. Provide for the District 24-hour leeway between the time they receive checks for collection and the time they post the transactions in their books.
3. Permit quicker removal of dead persons to funeral homes.

House District Chairman John L. McMillan (D., S. C.) said action on the bill for enlarging and lighting Eastern High stadium was postponed to a later District day. McMillan took the lead in urging the continuation of rent control.

House Overrides Postal Veto

House Postoffice and Civil Service Committee yesterday approved a bill to overhaul the postal accounting system in line with suggestions made by the Hoover Commission.

Postoffice and General Accounting officials have been fighting over the accounting plan for months. But yesterday they agreed to a bill and the committee quickly approved their compromise. Robert McCormick of the Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report, said the bill was a "man-sized bite" toward a modern and business-like accounting system but it didn't go far enough.

Under the bill, General Accounting's postal accounts division situated in Asheville, N. C., would be transferred to the Postoffice Department.

Fordyce W. Luckett will be director of Civil Service's new executive development program. He's now in Greece with the Economic Cooperation Administration, on leave from Civil Service. He'll take over his new job on September 1.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

NEW YORK, June 26.—The pitchers are very properly moaning at the 1950 model of the official major league baseball, claiming it is injected with so much jack-rabbit the bunny in the ball is practically talking out loud.

But Manager Billy Meyer, who saw his Pirates and the Dodgers average almost 20 runs a game in Brooklyn over the weekend, offers the most damning indictment of the juiced-up ball.

"That ball is an infernal machine now," said Meyer before getting out of town. "All you have to do is put one to your ear and you can hear the works inside ticking away like something ready to take off."

Meyer's description is only one cut below that of Sid Hudson, of the Nats, who agrees that: "When you grab the ball in your fist, you can almost feel that rabbit's heart throbbing. Guys you used to love to pitch to are now home run threats."

POVICH
READY TO TESTIFY, too, to the souped-up qualities of the ball is Dick Bartell, coach of the Tigers, who says he can tell it just by the feel.

"I'm in charge of the ball bag," says Bartell, "and I can tell just by squeezing them that there's a difference. Last year you could rub them and squeeze them and feel the cover loosen. This year you can't. They're wound so tight there's no give to them at all."

Bartell sounded downright wistful when he recalled "I hit 74 homers in nearly 20 years in the big leagues, but boy, how I wish they'd been using this ball in my days. I'll bet I'd have hit 300."

The league officials and the manufacturers are protesting that it's the same ball, with the same ingredients and the same methods of manufacture used in previous years, but nobody who is playing the game believes them. Clark Griffith says they're winding the yarn and the cover tighter.

SOMETHING ABOUT the ball is obviously different. At this rate, both American and National leagues are going to break their record for home run totals, and it can't all be blamed on inferior pitching. They've already raised the record of most homers in one day—forty. The home run is getting cheap.

So is the grand slam homer. The most ever hit in any previous year were the 59 in 1933. With the season less than half finished, 37 have already been belted this year. When Cleveland scored 10 runs against Washington the other day, not a Cleveland runner had to hustle across the plate. They all scored on home run smacks.

The bunt and the squeeze play and the hit-and-run is deadlier than the dodo. Managers and players are so home-run conscious that when the Yankees needed two runs to tie the Indians in the late innings the other day, and had runners on first and second with none out, Casey Stengel went for the works. With a count of three balls and no strikes on Joe DiMaggio, he gave him the sign to go for the works.

WHEN THE NATS were getting licked three straight by Cleveland, Bucky Harris could reconcile himself to the tremendous home runs belted out of the park by the Indians' strong arm men, Luke Easter, Larry Doby and Al Rosen. He knew they could overpower the ball any time they could swing.

"What hurt, though, was when Ray Boone and Bobby Avila started hitting 'em out of the park," said Harris. "This new ball has made home run hitters out of everybody. I don't mind getting licked on homers by home run hitters but when slap-hitters lick you with honors I don't blame the pitchers for griping."

Avila had hit exactly one home run in his major league career when he beat Mickey Harris with his second homer the other day. "That wasn't the eye-opener, though," says Bucky Harris. "The one that made me blink was in the next game when Irv Noren had to go back to the center field fence to catch little Avila's smash. That's where the sign says 410 feet. Ugh."

Senate Rejects Sports Fund

The Senate Appropriations Committee yesterday knocked out of the District supply bill a $28,000 House-approved fund for purchase of athletic equipment for the 14 senior high schools here.

The action isn't final, the bill will go to the Senate floor and, if approved, back to the House for consultation. The Senate group also recommended deletion of the amount until Superintendent of Public Schools Hobart M. Corning submits a study of the entire athletic program requested by the House Appropriations Committee. In neighboring Alexandria, the city has spent $200,000 the past three years in improving and lighting George Washington Stadium. The program enabled GW to take in $27,000 last year and half that amount was spent on athletic equipment.

City athletic appropriations for high school sports are the general rule around the country.

Jockey Jake, Racing Regular, Dies

Fabulous Character Knew Everybody

By Walter Haight

Jake has done his last favor—"for free," as he used to say.

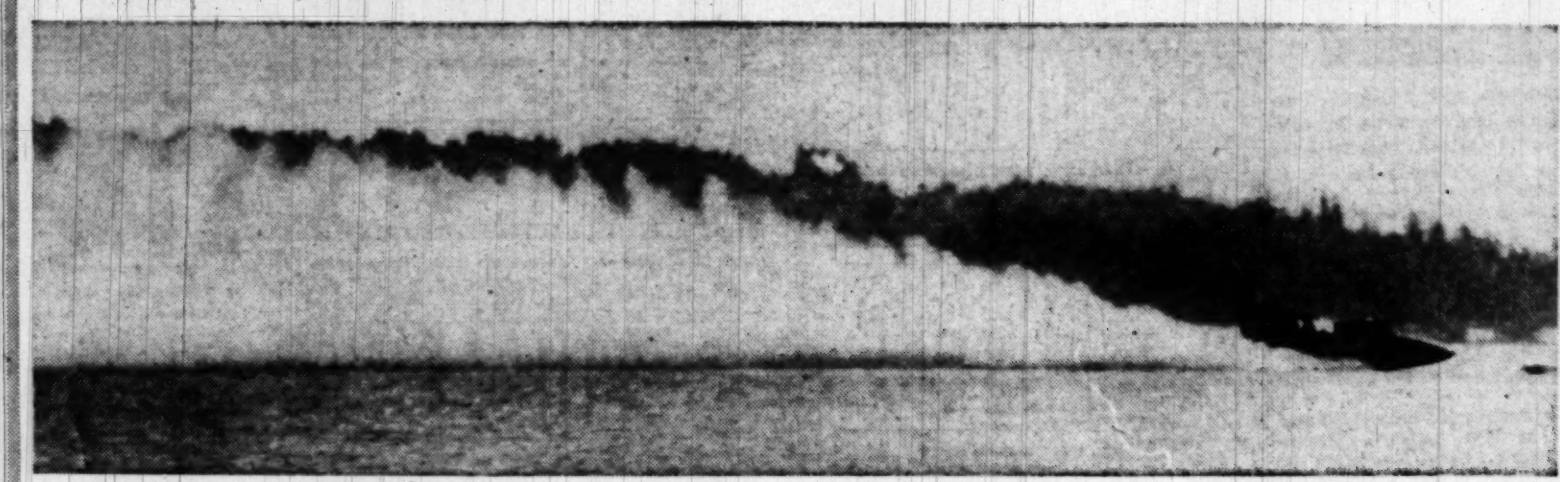

The little fellow, as well known to race followers in Washington as the Monument and as familiar at the Nation's tracks as the three-eight pole, passed away here yesterday.

His thousands of friends, in almost every walk of life, will learn by his death that his real name was Jacob Udelavich. He was variously known as Jake Jacobs, Jockey No. 1, Washington Jake and Jacob Love.

He collapsed at Union Station while hurrying for the Delaware Park race track special, and was rushed to Casualty Hospital in an ambulance. He was pronounced dead there by Dr. Joseph M. Rogers. He was 52.

Jake, 52, was born in Russia and came to this country with his parents shortly after the turn

American Sets 160 MPH Speedboat Record

A camera shooting at 1/1000th of a second can't stop motion of "Slow-Mo-Shun" during record run yesterday

Seattle, June 26 (AP)—Stan Sayres whipped his 1500-horsepower Slo-Mo-Shun IV over Lake Washington at a spectacular 160-plus miles an hour today for a world speedboat record.

His rakish-looking hydroplane whined twice over a measured mile course at a pace nearly 19 miles an hour over the British-held former record. The former mark of 141.74 miles, set by Sir Malcolm Campbell's Bluebird II on Lake Coniston, England, has stood for 11 years.

The 28-foot mahogany boat is powered by a 1500-horsepower war surplus Allison airplane engine.

Sayres also cracked two other records—the American record of 138.60 miles per hour set in 1949 in Picton,

Ont., by Harold Wilson in the boat, Miss Canada IV, and the United States record of 127.063 miles per hour set on August 20, 1949, by Dan Arena at Gull Lake, Mich., in the boat Such Crust.

The speedboat, named at a joking suggestion of Sayres' wife, skimmed the first mile in 21.98 seconds—163.785 miles an hour.

Refueling in just half the 15-minute time limit set by international speed-trial rules, he ran the mile course from the opposite direction in 22.95 seconds, or 156.862 miles.

Kent Hitchcock, referee representing the American Power Boat Association, announced the combined average was 160.3235 miles an hour. The record time is subject to official confirmation by the International Motorboat Union, but Hitchcock said this "would be pretty much a formality."

Ted Jones, designer of the Slo-Mo-Shun, rode with Sayres in the record-breaking performance.

Sayres said he was "very pleased" at the boat's performance and will enter it in major competition. His first goal is the Gold Cup races in Detroit next month.

The boat's showing there will determine whether it will be entered in the International Harmsworth Trophy competition at Detroit in September.

Sayres said he has decided against any additional time trials. "We don't want to press our luck. The boat's next trip will be the Gold Cup races."

Tigers Win On Keller's Triple, 6-4

Detroit, June 26 (AP)—King-Kong Charley Keller picked a timely spot for his first hit as a Detroit Tiger as he poked out a game-winning two-run triple in a five-run eighth inning to beat the Chicago White Sox 6 to 4 today.

The Bengals' victory increased their American League lead to 3½ games over the idle New York Yankees.

The Tigers, held to three hits through seven innings by Billy Pierce, broke up the ball game with their five-run, five-hit eighth inning, featuring triples by Don Kolloway and Keller.

Pierce took a four-run lead into that eighth inning, but retired under fire.

Successful singles by Gerry Priddy, George Kell and Vic Wertz got the Tigers' big inning under way, and cut Chicago's lead to 4-2.

The Detroit rally was halted momentarily on a double play as Hoot Evers struck out with Kell being cut down at the plate as he attempted to score.

Johnny Groth then walked to set the stage for Kolloway's two-run triple that tied the game at four-all.

After Aaron Robinson walked, Eddie Lake was sent up as a pinch-hitter and Randy Gumpert replaced Pierce.

Detroit Manager Red Rolfe then switched his strategy, sending the lefthander Keller up to hit for Lake.

Navy Football Gets a Lift

The Senate enthusiastically went along yesterday with Navy's plea for an even shot with Army at more and better football talent.

It approved unanimously a bill equalizing regulations for the United States Military Academy at West Point and Naval Academy at Annapolis.

The bill now goes back to the House for approval of Senate changes.

Under the measure, Annapolis officials could fill student body vacancies as they choose from their list of qualified extra candidates.

Army has had the authority since 1942.

Through the provision, the West Pointers had been able to snare many qualified footballers who contributed to Navy defeats every year since 1943 except in 1948. In that year, the two service rivals battled to a 21-21 tie.

The legislation also makes several other changes in admission requirements for the two academies.

One day at Hialeah the racing writers had gone broke on a tip in an earlier race. Jake, his checked card pulled over his eyes and his pictures and papers under his arm, walked with a rather dejected look on his face.

"Let me have a hundred?" I yelled to Jake and the scribes laughed loudly.

A little later, Jake came to the back of the box, edged in beside me, opened his wallet, ruffled a handful of century notes and said quietly, "Take all you want."

Survivors include a sister, Mrs. Charles Steelman, 2704 Courtland pl. nw., and three brothers, Irving Love, 3010 Wisconsin ave. nw.; David, of Milwaukee, and Morris, also of Washington.

Funeral services will be held this afternoon at Danzansky's, 3501 14th st. nw. Burial will be in Chevy Chase Cemetery, Anacostia.

Seeded Win At Wimbledon

By the United Press

Wimbledon, June 26.—The 15 seeded players, plus all the Americans, marched through the first round of men's singles in the all-England lawn tennis championships today.

Although hampered by torn wrist ligaments, first-seeded Frank Sedgman of Australia scored a 6-4, 7-5, 6-4 victory over Howard Walton of Great Britain.

The four American favorites—Art Larsen, Budgie Patty, Gardnar Mulloy and Bill Talbot had easy matches.

Tomorrow's brings the second round of the men's singles plus the first round and some of the second round matches in the women's singles.

Yesterday's results:

Jaroslav Drobný, Czech, defeated Christian Gracie, France, 6-2, 6-1.

Geoff Brown, Australia, defeated Ady Shal, Egypt, 6-1, 6-2.

Vet Beaten By Williams; Harper Puts Demaret Out

Columbus, Ohio, June 26 (AP)—Age, heat and Henry Williams Jr., eliminated Henry Picard from the PGA championship today in one of the most startling combination comebacks and collapses in big-time golf.

Leading 6 up with only eight holes to play the 42-year-old Picard practically collapsed under the strain of his third straight 36-hole match and was sidelined on the thirty-eighth hole.

Joining the 33-year-old Williams, pro at Secane, Pa., in tomorrow's finals of the $40,000 tournament is Chandler Harper, public links pro from Portsmouth, Va., who eliminated Jimmy Demaret, 2 and 1.

Picard's Collapse Starts

Picard, taking part in his first PGA since 1941, was three under par when the lightning struck on the twenty-ninth hole.

Williams grabbed the next two with pars, halved the next with a one-over-par effort, and then won four straight with par, par, birdie, par, to square the match with one to go.

They halved the thirty-sixth in birdies, Williams getting down an 8-footer after his second shot had screamed into the gallery back of the green and dropped at the edge.

The thirty-seventh was halved in par fours, but Picard three-putted from 45 feet on the thirty-eighth, muffing an 18-incher, to give Williams the match.

Harper has won several Virginia State Amateur and Open titles, and with his $2000 first prize at Tucson this season has amassed $3482.50 in tournament gold this year. Williams, in nine events this year has won a total of $192, getting $92 for a seventeenth place tie at Tucson and $100 for a twenty-ninth place deadlock in the U. S. Open at Merion.

In winning at Tucson, Harper set an all-time putting record by using only 20 strokes on the greens in compiling a third-round 63. And it was his putter and

'Sweetheart' Wins $10,000 Laurel Trot

Irish Sweetheart, owned by Bob Browne Jr. of Baltimore and driven by Frank Ervin, trotted a 2:13 2/5 mile last night at Laurel Raceway to emerge victorious by a neck in the Lord Baltimore two-year-old pace, the first of six $10,000 stakes.

The fleet filly by Phonograph repeated her victory in the $5000 Washington last week, thus winning in her only two starts, a $5,000 and a $10,000 stake. Last night she returned $8, $5 and 4.40.

In spite of the fact that Irish Sweetheart had finished two lengths ahead of Bernie Hanover last week, the colt went off at the 8-5 post choice of the 6500 fans while Irish Sweetheart was second choice in the wagering.

Irish Sweetheart finished a length ahead of Alexandria Hanover piloted by Del Cameron for Octave Blake who was in turn a half length in front of Watcha, owned by William N. Reynolds and handled by Del Miller.

"The bullpen will look better to me now," opined Harris. "I can maneuver a bit. It used to be worrisome to look down there and see only Dick Welteroth and Jim Pearce and Joe Haynes. I had to be sparing with Mickey Harris until the late innings."

From Joe Engel, Chattanooga president, Harris now learns that he didn't get Chattanooga's best pitcher when they sent him young Bobby Ross two weeks ago. "Engel now says that Sima will do a better job for us," Harris pointed out.

Over Herring Bay Course D. C. Sailors Just Miss Sweep In Fair Haven Club Regatta

By Happy Walker

WASHINGTON SAILING—Skipper came home laden with trophies over the weekend after participating in the annual Fair Haven Sailing Club regatta on nearby Herring Bay.

The Hartge brothers of Galeville, Md., deprived the local sailing clan of making a clean sweep of all top honors in the three-race, two-day event. At that, the localities took all but two events.

Buddy Hartge took first place in the special West River sailing club race from Galesville up, then went on to claim another first in the three-race Chesapeake 20s in his Endeavor. Brother Dick managed a third in the same class.

Another brother act from Washington was a priest, a dentist and an electronics engineer who make up the famed

MEN OVER 25 WHOSE HAIR IS GETTING THIN—GROOM IT WITH KREML

TO AVOID THAT GREASY LOOK—
MAKE HAIR LOOK MORE ABUNDANT

If you're feeling self-conscious about your hair getting thin on top or receding at the temples, don't call attention to it by plastering your hair down with greasy, sticky products which leave an unsightly, dirt-trapping, shiny film on the scalp. Now is the time to graduate to Kreml! Kreml Hair Tonic is different from any dressing you've ever used. It never looks greasy or sticky—it never plasters hair down. Instead, Kreml is especially blended to thoroughly spread through the hair and make it look naturally self-groomed—make hair look thicker, more abundant. Also unsurpassed to remove dandruff flakes and give sleepy scalps a delightful "wake-up" tingle. Ask for the new large 16-oz. size of Kreml Hair Tonic and save nearly 50%.

Entire Police Force Lauded By Barrett

The entire Metropolitan police force was commended yesterday for its "splendid work" during the first five months of 1950.

Superintendent Robert J. Barrett praised his men for their "outstanding work" in solving 459 robberies during the January-May period and went on to add a second commendation to Inspector Robert S. Bryant, chief of detectives, and the men who worked with him in solving the Bolling Air Force base taxicab slaying case.

In announcing the two commendations, Major Barrett said there had been 571 robberies of all types during the five months. He said 459 robberies had been solved by May 1.

Major Barrett praised the "excellent teamwork" which brought out the crimes' solutions. "This outstanding work," he said, "was accomplished by long hours of hard work by members of the department. . . I have had many favorable comments from people who are impressed with the work of our department."

In issuing a separate commendation to Inspector Bryant and the men who worked on the Bolling case, Major Barrett praised the "outstanding work and tireless efforts which resulted in the satisfactory conclusion of the case." He said Inspector Bryant, as commanding officer of detectives, will submit a list of names of the officers who worked on the case so a notation may be made on their official records.

Police investigation into the murder of Gordon C. Brown, jr., 24, Postoffice Department employe and part-time cab driver, led to the arrest of Pvt. Gilbert W. Reynolds, 18, of the Bolling Air Force base. He has been charged with murder and held for grand jury action. Major Barrett pointed out that 4300 men at the base were questioned before the arrest was made.

Viola Brown, 46, 1643 6th st. nw. Louise Wells, 32, 239 Elm st. nw.

Mary Lewis, 60, 231 O st. nw.

Like the persons taken to other hospitals, all these bus passengers suffered only minor cuts and bruises and were released after treatment.

When the bus slid across the sidewalk it smashed an iron fence which had just been repaired following a similar encounter with a bus two or three years ago. It knocked down a sizable tree, which fell on the bus. The vehicle also wrecked the iron steps leading to the doorway of the house, and wrecked a staging set up for a painting job.

Resident Protests All-Night Parties At Virginia Beach

Princess Anne Courthouse, Va., June 26 (AP)—Wild parties at Virginia Beach that last until dawn were the subject of a complaint received today by the Princess Anne County Board of Supervisors.

E. R. Crall, of 58th st. at the northern end of the beach, wrote Supervisor Walter C. Maher a letter complaining of "teen-agers, riffs and tramps that come prepared to celebrate and raise hell in general . . ."

The offenders drive to the northern end of the beach and hold parties on the sand from late at night until dawn, Crall reported. He said participants were "whooping, singing and swearing, drunk, half drunk, clothed and unclothed, smashing empty liquor bottles up against houses, in the yards and street."

Permit Matter Md. Dairies Undergo D. C. Checkup

The District Health Department yesterday started inspecting 202 Maryland dairy farms which are trying to obtain District permits before the ban on imported milk goes into effect July 1.

Walter W. Burdette, director of the department's bureau of food inspection, said two inspectors have been put on special overtime duty for the job. One will inspect 125 farms near Queens-town on the Eastern Shore that ship to Embassy Dairy he said. The other will check 77 farms in the Cumberland area supplying Wakefield Dairy.

A spokesman for Wakefield Dairy said another batch of applications from its shippers near Myersdale, Pa., just over the State line from Cumberland, will probably be sent to the Health Department today.

Man Sentenced To 180 Days For Thefts

Willis G. Hubbard, 27, of 4200 Benning rd. ne, yesterday was sentenced to 180 days in jail for rifling the vending machines of the G. B. Macke Corp., where he worked as a laborer.

He pleaded guilty in Municipal Court to three charges of petty larceny involving the theft of $8 in coins from a cigarette machine at a service station at 4451 Deane ave. ne, November 9, the theft of $8 from the same machine November 16, and $10.50 from a cigarette machine in a gas station at 4700 Deane ave. ne, November 9.

Police said in each case, the machines were opened with duplicate keys. A set of duplicate keys for the machines was found in the woods near Hubbard's home when he was arrested there Sunday, they said.

The company first noticed someone was rifling their machines, scattered around town, about eight months ago, according to police. They said even the cigarette machine which stands in the hallway of the company's headquarters at 212 H st. nw. had been rifled. More than $500 in coins was taken over the eight-month period, they said. Judge Armond Scott sentenced Hubbard.

Boy Scouts 'Storm' City; Many Late Due to Floods

Hundreds of Boy Scouts were in Washington yesterday, en route to the national jamboree at Valley Forge, Pa., arrival of many delayed by the West Virginia floods. Representative Ben H. Guill (R., Texas), went to Union Station at 6:30 a. m. to greet Scouts from the Texas Panhandle, but their train did not arrive until late afternoon.

Representative Tom Pickett (D., Texas) arranged to feed 50 boys from his district in the speaker's dining room at the Capitol. Plates were set, the milk was ready, and the waiters waited two hours before the hospitable gesture was abandoned.

The Central Y. M. C. A., 1732 G st. nw., kept its swimming pool two hours overtime last night to let 300 boys have a swim. The "Y" was unable to accommodate another 600 who wanted to shower.

Takoma Park Names Special Police Force

Mayor Ross H. Beville and the Takoma Park (Md.) city council last night named themselves and four private citizens as special police without compensation.

The action, taken as an emergency civilian defense precaution in the event of bombing or other catastrophe, was proposed by Councilman Brooks Ferring, chairman of public safety.

The four private citizens, whose duties will be to prevent panic and to control traffic, are Clarence E. Werbach, Robert E. Mohr, John Coffman, Jr., and Elmer J. White. All four attended FBI classes in police procedure held in Takoma Park last year.

Police Chief Chester E. Thomas announced that as soon as the new appointees are sworn in as special police he would arrange for another FBI class.

In other action at the meeting in the Municipal Building, the council reappointed the police chief, fire chief, public works superintendent and the paid personnel under them for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

The council also voted to advertise for bids for widening and paving and for curbs and gutters on the Hancock st., Sheridan st., and Lincoln ave. projects.

Mayor Beville announced that the United States Navy Band will give a concert at 8 p. m. Saturday in the Laurel ave. and Carroll st. park.

Polish Aide in Rome Said to Have Deserted

Rome, June 26 (AP)—The independent newspaper Momento Sera reported today that Polish commercial attaché Ludwik Wedolowski, a "trusted Communist," quit his post today and fled his embassy.

Person at the embassy would say only that "authorized" officials were out. Telephone calls to Wedolowski's apartment were unanswered.

Probers Lay DC-3 Crash To Engine Stall

A Civil Aeronautics Board report yesterday said the "probable" cause of the crash of a Capital Airlines DC-3 into the Potomac River the night of December 12, 1949, was stalling of one or both engines.

Four of 20 passengers, the pilot and the copilot were killed in the crash. The flight originated at Memphis, Tenn.

The plane, approaching National Airport for a landing, dove into the river "left wing and nose first, in a steep nose down, left turning attitude," the CAB said.

Carburetor ice, exhaustion of fuel in the right main tank and failure of both engines to respond simultaneously to a rapid advancement of throttles were given as possible reasons for the plane's stalling "at too low an altitude to effect recovery." Loss of safe flying speed during the landing approach was also suggested as a factor.

Room? Plenty—in big, sofa-wide seats and generous room for elbows and shoulders. Style? Well take a look—see anything on the road today that is so smart, so sleek, so quickly spotted?

But that's just a start in this beauty. Here you're going to meet the "ride of a lifetime"—smooth, level-going comfort in the quite matchless Buick manner.

Just see why this is so:

Most cars have coil springs in front. Buick has them all around.

Most cars now ride on low-pressure tires.

Buick adds to them Safety-Ride rims to cut heel-over and sway.

Most cars drive through the rear springs, which means they have to be stiff. Buick drives through a firm torque-tube that takes up driving thrust and roughness.

And no other car—no, not a single one—has all these comfort extras plus husky frames plus Hi-Poised engine mountings plus middle-of-the-car seating plus the extra silkiness of Dynaflo Drive. *Standard on ROADMASTER, optional at extra cost on SUPER and SPECIAL models.

Optional equipment; state and local taxes; if any, additional. Prices may vary slightly in adjoining communities due to shipping charges. All prices subject to change without notice.

Worth something? You bet it is. But it's riding luxury that doesn't show up in the price tags. Figures start at levels lower than on many sixes—yet every Buick has this matchless array of ride features.

Better come learn about them—by firsthand trial. Can you see your Buick dealer today?

Senate Unit Puts OK on $119 Million D. C. Budget

Appropriation Bill Provides $6 Million More Than Total Approved by House

A District budget total of $119,019,562 was approved yesterday by the Senate Appropriations Committee.

The action forwarded to the Senate the District appropriation bill for the year starting July 1 at a level $6,179,222 above the total approved by the House.

Major items in the 5.5 percent increase were: (1) A fund of $2,041,800 to start the East Capitol bridge over the Anacostia River; (2) a $1,928,000 additional amount for speeding expansion of the water supply system; $1,405,000 of the water money would come from a Federal loan; (3) $245,000 additional for payments to private hospitals for care of indigent patients; and (4) $500,000 additional for sewer construction.

Seeks Passage This Week

The recommendations were prepared by a subcommittee headed by Senator Lister Hill (D., Ala.). He said he will seek Senate passage this week. He said the subcommittee also is recommending the Federal payment to the District be 12 million dollars for the fiscal year starting July 1 as it now is. The House voted to cut the payment for next year by 10 percent. The payment is carried in the separate Federal appropriation bill.

In other decisions, the Senate committee refused $30,000 for District civil defense planning; granted the Redevelopment Land Agency $15,500 for slum clearance; and told the Police Department to use some of 30 additional policemen for which funds are granted to bolster the vice squad.

Besides the funds for the land agency, a $11,475 fund for the National Capital Area Council will leave from Union Station at 1:30 p. m. for the Nation-wide jamboree at Valley Forge, Pa. Before the jamboree begins on Friday, the Washington boys will do some practice camping at Valley Forge and will set up their exhibits, including a replica of the Washington Monument, 30 feet high.

Two hundred boys waved goodbye to their families yesterday at Metropolitan Police Boys Club No. 4, 816 6th st. sw. They were the first delegation of some 1500 boys who will spend two weeks at Camp Brown, Scotland, Md., before the summer is over.

Another 200 boys will leave from Police Boys Club No. 2, 1200 U. st. nw., today at 9:30 a. m. for two weeks at the new $100,000 camp for Negro boys which also is near Scotland, Md. Both camps are operated by the Metropolitan Police Boys Clubs and are free.

The first of four two-week camping periods at Camp Kahler, YWCA camp at West River, Md., opened yesterday with more than 100 girls eager to begin the summer's outdoor activity.

Camp Theodore Roosevelt at Willows, Md., operated by the Boy Scouts, opened yesterday with more than 300 boys and 81 leaders and staff members. An additional 60 boys are camping at Camp Herbert Hoover in the Shenandoah Mountains.

Members of the Boys Club of Washington, 100 strong, headed for Camp Reader on the Wisconsin River in Charles County, Md., for two weeks of camping. The camp will be open for eight weeks.

Physical examinations were given to 150 boys who plan to go to Camp Nanjemoy, operated by the Merrick Boys Club at the Christ Child Settlement House, 608 C st. ne. They will leave on Saturday.

Recreation centers in Montgomery County, Md., will be open from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. daily through August 27. Nearly 7000 children are expected to participate in the summer program of games, sports, craft work and swimming.

A staff of about 750 will supervise the summer program sponsored by the District Recreation Department. They will work at 123 playgrounds, nine day camps, two swimming pools and 12 walking pools.

Police Lieut. John K. Baker and Sgt. John L. Sullivan of the homicide squad both testified the ankyu youth admitted to them he had planned only to rob car driver Gordon C. Brown Jr., 24, of 224 Carmody Hills dr., Carmody Hills, Md.

Police said the airman had confessed he struck Brown with a homemade blackjack and "then got scared and shot him."

The jury returned to the District Morgue hearing room with its verdict after 15 minutes' deliberation.

The youth, visibly shaken, was not represented by an attorney and was permitted to question the witnesses.

His only query came after Lieut. Baker told the jury Reynolds had confessed he had taken Brown's wallet from his pocket.

"You said I took the man's wallet out of his pocket," Reynolds asked the detective.

"That's right," Baker replied. Reynolds paused several seconds, then said, "I didn't."

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald, presiding over the hearing, asked the youth if he wished to make a statement to the jury.

"I wish to wait," Reynolds said. While the jury was out, the defendant thumbed a pencil letter.

Police had given Reynolds the letter as the jury filed from the room. They hinted it was written by Reynolds' relatives from Sayre, Pa., his home town.

"This is the first I've heard from anyone since it happened," Reynolds told reporters. He added that he has not written to anyone back home since his arrest last week.

Sgt. Sullivan said Reynolds told him under questioning how his grandmother had cared for him. Reynolds said his grandmother was in debt, had put a roof and storm windows on her house and that his step-grandfather was in a State hospital. For this reason, Reynolds said, he decided to hold up a gas station or a cab driver, Sullivan testified.

MacDonald told the jury an autopsy revealed the victim died as a result of gunshot wounds and brain injuries.

Earlier Sullivan testified police had picked up a .38 revolver in Sayre after Reynolds "gave us some information" on where it could be located.

Hundreds of Greater Washington boys and girls yesterday left the city's heat behind them and headed for summer camps.

For the stay-at-homes, both the District Recreation Department and the Recreation Department of the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission opened day camps and recreation centers.

Today 142 Boy Scouts from the National Capital Area Council will leave from Union Station at 1:30 p. m. for the Nation-wide jamboree at Valley Forge, Pa. Before the jamboree begins on Friday, the Washington boys will do some practice camping at Valley Forge and will set up their exhibits, including a replica of the Washington Monument, 30 feet high.

President Will Lay Cornerstone Today For 'Biggest, Finest' Courthouse in U. S.

13 Million Dollar Building Seen as Personal Victory For Judge Laws

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

The judges and lawyers of Washington will be out in force at 3 p. m. today to witness President Truman lay the cornerstone for what will be the "biggest and finest" United States Courthouse in the Nation.

The public ceremony will be held at the rising structure located at Constitution ave. and John Marshall pl. nw. There will be band music and speeches, and President Truman will use a silver trowel with a handle made of an 80-year-old window from the old District Court.

Workers now are busy on the sixth floor of the 13-million-dollar limestone and granite building which will house the District Court, the United States Court of Appeals and related offices. It is structurally of reinforced concrete designed in a simplified form of the architecture of Constitution ave. Federal buildings.

The new building, which emphasizes convenience for the layman, must be a personal triumph for Chief Judge Bolitha J. Laws of District Court. For many years he fought for a local courthouse of which the city could be proud.

At the beginning, some of his associates had opposed moving from the old quarters in Judiciary Square, and Congress had to be constantly prodded to approve such a job in this high-cost building era.

With its 2,534,400 cubic feet, the new building is more than three times the size of the present District Court. The building will have 546,000 square feet of floor space, or about eight times that of the present structure.

There are 19 standard courtrooms and another with a seating capacity of 300 for special ceremonies such as naturalizations and memorial services and for judicial conferences. For the first time, the Appeals Court will have a courtroom with seating space at a curved bench for its nine judges.

Special arrangement is made for maximum security for prisoners. For the most part, they are sealed off from the public until they reach the courtrooms.

No longer will prisoners be led handcuffed from one building to another, with the court's functions now carried on in 10 different buildings. One of its sections is presently atop the standard Oil Building, 3d and Constitution ave. nw.

Judge Laws, who says the Federal court is the Nation's biggest and best, feels that with its accent on the layman's facilities, it will be a pioneer for courts to come.

Witnesses and jurors are provided parking space. There are numerous elevators in the air-conditioned building and an escalator.

A message center will be kept for persons having business in the court who wish to keep in touch with their offices and families. There are lounges furnished as clubrooms, and a judges dining room and public cafeteria.

Citizens summoned to the court may get special rooms where their secretaries and aides may work with them during necessary lull periods for witnesses and jurors.

On the top floor is a large suite of rooms where jurors locked over night can sleep.

Walls in courtrooms and certain offices such as the press room will be treated to keep down the noise level.

Outside the courthouse will be a triangle inscribed with excerpts from the Constitution and Declaration of Independence. A massive bronze statue of Blackstone will be placed at the building front.

The architects, Justement, Elam and Darby, were guided by Judge Laws and Chief Judge Harold M. Stephens of the Appeals Court who called on fellow judges and aides for suggestions. They have combined the best features of tribunals throughout the country.

The new building will be ready for occupancy late in 1951 or early 1952, the judges were informed by the contractor, Charles H. Tompkins.

The site itself is historic; it is in the area where three Chief Justices of the United States resided.

When the townfolk turned out on August 22, 1820, to see the cornerstone laid for the City Hall in Judiciary Square, there was a big parade and the speaker accused Congress of failing to encourage development of Washington.

On that torrid summer day, cannon boomed from the Navy Yard and Fort Washington to celebrate the event. The Masons, clad in aprons and pantaloons, were in charge. Ladies excepted, no one could enter the building grounds for selling liquor to Negroes.

City Hall, which remained uncompleted for a century, was finally to become known as the United States Court for the District of Columbia.

There were earlier courts for the city. Sessions were held back as far as 1801 on Capitol Hill, in Hastings Court Building, Alexandria, in Lindsay's and Long's Hotels on 1st st. se., in "Mr. Carroll's House" and in the Brick Capitol.

Disaffection mounted with the migratory courts and the city fathers decided on the Judiciary Square site. They tried to raise money by 10 percent loans and by a lottery, both of which failed, and finally the money had to come from the city treasury.

In 1820, the City Council accepted the plans of Architect George Hadfield. Then, they discovered that the Georgian-style structure would cost $375,000, and Hadfield was fired with $300 paid for his services.

Construction went on along Hadfield's designs. The city government moved in and moved out, and slowly, the building became a tribunal for the city.

Meanwhile, through the years, rooms in the building were rented to lawyers to raise funds. The Central Tippecanoe Club had its headquarters there. According to

Rent Boost Ordered at Fairlington

Rent increases averaging 9 percent—and in some cases as much as 25 percent—will go into effect August 1 at the 3439-unit Fairlington apartment development, it was announced yesterday by the Fairmac Corp. development owner.

All Virginia rent controls ended Sunday.

Fairlington tenants who signed two-year "voluntary" rent boost agreements in 1948 will not be affected by new schedules until their leases end December 31, 1950, Fairmac General Manager William Ziegler said.

Ziegler said rentals would be lowered in some cases. Tenants of the three-bedroom duplex apartment units will absorb the 25 percent rent hike—$89.50 to $112 monthly, he said.

Ziegler said there were 330 of these units. Only tenants who failed to agree to the "voluntary" 15 percent rent increases in 1948 would be immediately affected by the new jump, he said.

Hollywood, Md., Girl Stricken With Polio

A 19-year-old Hollywood, Md., girl was taken to Leland Memorial Hospital, Riverdale, yesterday, stricken with infantile paralysis.

Escorted by police, she was transferred to Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore. The case will require iron-lung treatment, doctors said.

3 Firemen Overcome by Bakery Blaze

Three firemen were overcome by smoke yesterday in a two-alarm fire which wrecked the second floor attic of the Diamond Bakery, 917 8th st. se.

The fire was discovered at about 2:50 p. m. by Joseph Lobianco, a barber at 919 8th st. se., who said he saw smoke pouring from the second-story window of the brick building and turned in an alarm.

The store was closed and no one was in the building, firemen said.

The firemen were overcome when they tried to enter the second floor front windows, from which heavy smoke was pouring. Treated with oxygen at the scene were Sergt. D. L. Reddy, 37, Ft. Carroll Boncrest, 30, and Pvt. J. W. Redman, 26, all of No. 8 Engine Company.

Firemen spent about a half an hour bringing the blaze under control. Fire Marshal Ray Roberts said flour and other bakery materials were stored on the second floor. He said no immediate estimate of the damage to the building was available, but that the bakery would not be usable for "some time."

The company is owned by Glenn M. Greenfield, of Marlboro pike, Md., who was on a fishing trip yesterday and could not be reached. Lobianco said Greenfield had come to the store briefly early yesterday morning.

Two Arlington Men, Two Sons Drowned

More to Come 14 Arrested In Crackdown On Fireworks

Fairfax County police yesterday announced a weekend crackdown on sales of explosive fireworks with the arrest of 14 men.

Police Sgt. Carl Shumate said: "There are more to come. We are determined to stamp out the sale or discharge of dangerous fireworks entirely."

Sergeant Shumate and County Police Chief Major Carl McIntosh led the raids which brought the arrests. He said police confiscated between 40 and 50 cartons of the dangerous fireworks.

Explosive fireworks, such as "torpedoes," etc., are illegal throughout the Washington area. Of the men arrested in the Fairfax crackdown, pleaded guilty to possession of explosive fireworks yesterday in Trial Magistrate Court. Two admitted sales. All were fined $50 each.

They are: James A. Orrison, 28, Box 324, Falls Church, and Lewis T. Radford, 29, of 2707 N. 1st st., Arlington, both of whom pleaded guilty to sale and possession, and William L. Covington, Jr., 25, of Box 152, Falls Church, who pleaded guilty to possession.

Fairfax police declined to disclose names of the 11 other persons arrested, pending trial.

Elsewhere in Greater Washington, police said sale of the explosive fireworks was pretty well under control. Maryland has had a State law since 1941 forbidding all fireworks, including sparklers.

In the District of Columbia, only nonexplosive fireworks, such as sparklers, etc., are allowed. Fireworks displays, such as those annually held on the Monument grounds, are authorized by permit approved by the District Commissioners.

Falls Church has a city ordinance banning explosive fireworks. All fireworks are banned in both Alexandria and Arlington County.

Their Bodies Recovered

Two persons were injured, one seriously, when a panel truck overturned shortly before noon yesterday on Greenbelt rd. near Edmonston rd., Greenbelt.

Injured were Daniel Manuel, 32, of 3715 35th st., Mount Rainier, the driver, who is in undetermined condition in Prince Georges General Hospital with head injuries and a possible spine fracture, and Joseph O'Malley, 14, of 4302 Newark rd., Colmar Manor, a rider, who was admitted to Leland Memorial Hospital for treatment of leg and shoulder injuries. Manuel is a private on the Mount Rainier Police Force.

Chief George Panagoulis, of the Greenbelt police, said the truck swerved to the right of the macadam road, then crossed to the left side before turning over on its right side.

Rescue squads from Branchville and Berwyn Heights had to lift the truck with jacks to remove O'Malley, whose leg was pinned. He was trapped for half an hour. The truck, owned by the Manuel Chemical Co., of Mount Rainier, was loaded with cases of glass containers of bleaching fluid.

D. C. Police Seek Escaped Veteran Mental Patient
A police lookout was broadcast last night for an escaped mental patient described as "dangerous if agitated."

Police said the patient was Dennis Pierce Click, 31, a World War II veteran, who broke away from a brother-in-law, Alfred J. Peterson, of Manassas, Va., at Mount Alto Hospital.

Click had escaped earlier in the day from the Dejeuville Sanatorium in Staunton, relatives said.

School Group In Fairfax Has New Role

The Fairfax School Emergency Association last night voted itself into permanent being and reaffirmed its stand on Virginia's need for a 122 million-dollar legislative school aid program.

The group was formed on a temporary basis to promote the recently approved $10,500,000 school bond issue. It will remain in existence as a liaison agency between the public and school authorities.

At a meeting in Fairfax High School, the following officers were elected: Mrs. G. A. Justusson, Annandale, president; Robert Carmody, Igloo Village, first vice president; Dr. E. B. Henderson, Falls Church, second vice president; Mrs. Dorothy McDiarmid, Vienna, secretary; and Maj. Silas M. Ransporth, Route 4, Alexandria, treasurer. W. Alford Sherman, Vienna, is the retiring president.

The group endorsed a two-year program for State school aid as proposed by its legislative committee. Specifically, the program would (1) increase State contributions to counties for each pupil attending school daily to $100 per year; (2) provide a $30,000,000 appropriation for the depleted Literary Loan Fund; (3) provide $10,000,000 for construction and remodeling of school buildings in counties and cities eligible under the Minimum Education Program Fund, and $10,000,000 more for school improvements in counties where school enrollment has jumped 50 percent or more since 1944.

Cool Comfort Cooked Up for Men

COOL and comfortable—that's what a man asks of his summer sportswear. At left, a fisherman finds both these qualities in a pair of lightweight, washable sandbar denim slacks, with elastic waistband and four big, roomy pockets. Beach-bound with his best girl at center, he wears rayon swim trunks with matching coat-shirt in bright Hawaiian print. For tennis it's a pair of longer length walking shorts of light linen-weave or cotton gabardine. Other versions of this style are done in wrinkle-resistant sailcloth. At right, a golf cap of raffia straw, porous and noncrushable with air-vents in the crown. With it is shown a cotton mesh polo shirt which comes in all colors, and a belted pair of slacks made of sheer tropical worsted, which comes in both dark and pastel colors. Fine Belgian Fabrics Star In Exhibition

Hand-woven fabrics, ranging from fine linens to sheer wools, sounded the outstanding note in yesterday's showing of Belgian fashions at the home of Mme. Myriam Heyne, daughter of the Belgian Minister, Maurice Heyne.

It was the first showing in this country of the interesting collection, made up of 30 late summer and fall costumes, designed by leading Belgian couturiers. The collection was brought to Washington by Mme. Laurette De Briel, who herself designed three of the gowns. She expects to show the group in other American cities before returning home later in the season.

Costumes for every hour of the day are included in the collection, and in practically every instance the fabrics used are hand-woven. Only a few have been made with the help of modern machines.

The informal showing was held from 5 to 7 in the garden of the Heyne residence in Georgetown. Models included Miss Margaret Thors, daughter of the Icelandic Minister and Mme. Thors; the Senoritas Felicia and Carlota Pardini, daughters of the Second Secretary of the Embassy of Panama and Senora de Pardini; Mrs. William Galloway and Mme. Heyne.

The Mayflower

By Peggy Preston

GATHER round, girls, while we do a bit of digging into the men's fashion field.

You'll be surprised at the amount of comfort, plus style, the boys have cooked up for themselves in the sportswear section. Nothing to rival ours, of course. No strapless sunbacks or sleeveless numbers. But, nevertheless, they've done right well by themselves. We feel we can say, without being too magnanimous, that the male of the species is beginning to display signs of developing a warm-weather fashion sense that is comparable to our own.

Manfolds are in there battling 1,000 in the color division. Flower-sprinkled cotton prints in red, green, yellow and blue take care of a large percentage of the swim trunks with matching box jackets. Practically every shade is used in slacks and shorts, and 1950 sports shirts can be a veritable riot of color, as we girls would say.

Sheer and Porous

Fabrics to foil King Sol's best-laid plans are not the sole property of the ladies, by any means. There are menswear summer cottons that are sheer and porous, allowing for plenty of air circulation. These are the fabrics that are going into short-sleeved sports shirts in ever increasing numbers. Nylon is being used in men's clothing in such quantities that there's hardly enough left over for us. It is finding its greatest popularity in swim trunks, where its quick-drying qualities make it an instant success. Rayon, too, is enjoying a newfound favoritism, although it is used most extensively in more formal menswear.

New Fabrics in Field

Denim matches women's play clothes of the same fabric in popularity. Then, there is wrinkle-resistant selcloth, terry cloth, gabardine, as well as scores of other cotton weaves being employed in all branches of sports togs.

Now for some style notes. To the feminine eye one shirt, pair of slacks or shorts may look the same as another. But there are subtle differences.

There are the walking shorts, for instance, several inches longer than the regulation shorts of other seasons. These, neatly tailored with cuffs and snap-fastened waistband, first caught the men's fancy at the Southern winter resorts. Now they're a "vogue" for golf, tennis, or just lounging around home.

Some claim these items have replaced slacks in the men's wardrobe. However, there are plenty of full-length sports trousers around to dispute this. The fisherman, considered a conservative sportsman, will like this season's slacks, cut with elastic waistband, four big pockets, lightweight denim.

Dressier Slacks, Too

Other, dressier slacks for town and country wear have hidden sponge pads on the inside of the waistband to hold the skirt in place. No belt needed!

The T-shirt, once a sad, droopy item, has taken on a new lease in life. It's being made in string knit weaves, and in sheer rayon plaids. Pullover deck shirts, novelty box jackets are among the many new sports togs being offered men this summer.

Throughout all there is the same comfort, with added coolness, color and style. So, taking all this into consideration, there is no good reason why that man in your life needs to resemble a badly mussed flour sack when he's cooling his heels around home this summer. His excuses just aren't valid any longer.

You Mean So Much

There is so much of happiness . . . That you have given me . . . That I could never pay you back . . . In time or memory . . . But I would like to have you know . . . I never will forget . . . And there has been no moment, dear . . . That I could once regret . . . There has not been a day with you . . . That has not been complete . . . Or ever any sorrow, dear . . . That has not tasted sweet . . . You are the echo of my heart . . . In every song I sing . . . And you are like a miracle . . . That only God can bring . . . And that is why I love you, dear . . . And from the very start . . . I have desired you so much . . . And given you my heart.

Nylon May Have a Rival

Wilmington, Del., (P)—A New synthetic textile that will resist wrinkles, dry quickly and wear like iron is in the offing for the American consumer.

E. I. du Pont de Nemours and company disclosed today it is evaluating the new textile fiber known as "fiber V."

The tests will determine the commercial possibilities of the material which Du Pont said is not chemically related to nylon.

Du Pont said the material has been made up in window curtains, blouses, sport shirts, sewing thread and summer suitings for the tests.

Technically, the material is a condensation polymer obtained from ethylene glycol and terephthalic acid. Fiber V, Du Pont said, has high tensile strength and high resistance to stretching—both wet and dry.

Daughters of the House, Plus Nieces and Sisters, Ready for Picnic Frolic

By Marie McNair and Elizabeth Maguire

THE Daughters of the House—that means unmarried daughters of members of the House of Representatives plus daughters-in-law, nieces and younger sisters of that body—will give a picnic this afternoon at 6:30 on the picnic grounds of the Army Navy Country Club.

The "Daughters" launched their first season this year since the war. They've been organized with a constitution and by-laws, etc.

Officers are Annie Laurie Rankin, president; Therese Elizabeth Kelly—better known as "Tek," who's the veep; Margaret Woodhouse, corresponding secretary; Anne Miller, recording secretary; and Helen Jennings, treasurer. Annie Laurie Rankin hopes that all those eligible to the organization will join up.

Concert Group

Launches Drive

MEMBERSHIP drive for the 1950-51 season of the Georgetown Concert Group will be launched today at a garden party to be held at the home of Mrs. James Orr Denby, 1520 33d street, n. w., from 5:30 to 7 o'clock.

Among the guests will be Mrs. Gerhard Van Arkel, chairman of the Georgetown Concert Group, and Mr. Van Arkel, Mrs. George W. Oakes, secretary, and Mr. Oakes; Cameron LaClair, treasurer; Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Mellen; Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Keck; Mrs. John Warwick Daniel 3d, Richard Bales, and David Flodin.

The concert group functions as a club with members paying dues. Eight concerts starting on November 16 will be held on Thursday nights at 8 p. m. in Western High School.

A country party was the cocktail gathering Sunday at Humming Hollow, summer home of Miss Genevieve Hendricks and Mrs. Marjory Hendricks in Blue mont. Honor guest at this garden fete was Rixey Smith, president of Woodlawn Foundation, who has recently leased Stone Haven on the mountain above Snickers' Gap at Bluemont. The house is an old chapel that was remodeled and decorated by Miss Hendricks. Miss Flora Orr of Washington was a house guest of Miss Hendricks over the weekend.

The Puerto Rican-American Women's League held a tea Sunday at the Pen Women's studio, honoring Mrs. Virginia Rollway Collier, past president of the League, and Dr. Paquita Carr, incoming president. The tea was held from 4:30 to 7 o'clock. A program of entertainment included Spanish dances and piano and guitar solos. Mrs. John P. Lautz served as chairman of the tea.

Mr. and Mrs. John F. Crosby and their family have left for Spring Lake, N. J., to open their summer home there for the season.

Rear Admiral Robert L. Dennison, USN, Naval Aide to the President, and Mrs. Dennison; the Secretary of the United States Senate and Mrs. Leslie L. Biddle, Rudolf Schoenfeld, Deputy Undersecretary of State John E. Purifoy, and Miss Genevieve Reynolds, who is leaving soon for her new post at the United States in Rio.

Mrs. Charles Stengle was hostess at luncheon yesterday at the Shoreham in honor of Mrs. Stephen Pace, wife of the Representative from Georgia who is retiring from Congress this year.

Other guests were Mrs. William W. Arnold, wife of Judge Arnold; Mrs. John Rankin, Mrs. Roy Woodruff, Mrs. James S. Shera Montgomery, Mrs. Anthony J. Diamond, Mrs. Elmer Lewis, Mrs. Clem Williams, Mrs. Rodney Marshall, Mrs. Charles Dixon, Mrs. Julius C. Townsend, Miss Barbara Townsend, Mrs. Ernest Paland, Mrs. O. M. Yokum, Mrs. J. C. Hooten, Mrs. Florence Price, Mrs. T. S. Kirkland of Georgia, and Mrs. J. C. Luckett of Missouri.

Popular Diplomat

Winds Up Visit

ALFRED STIRLING, who was so popular when he served here as Australian Minister, ended his short visit to Washington yesterday. He has returned to New York where he is attending meetings of the United Nations Trusteeship Council. At present, Mr. Stirling is Australian High Commissioner in South Africa. His sister, Miss Dorothy Stirling, is visiting in Australia while Mr. Stirling remains in New York.

The Ambassador of Australia, Norman J. O. Makin, gave a men's luncheon at the embassy yesterday honoring Mr. Stirling. In the company were the New Zealand Ambassador, Sir Carl Berendsen; Walter Wilder, S. G. McFarlane, Australian Financial Counselor; Colin Moodie, Australian Counselor; J. U. Garfield, Australian Commercial Counselor; W. Dirke-Van-Schalkwyk, First Secretary at the South African Embassy, and H. A. Graves, British Counselor.

Also, James E. Palmer, Jr., Edmund R. Purves, Raymond Muir, John Montgomery and Luther Evans, Librarian of Congress.

Mrs. Frank Mason, wife of Col. Frank E. Mason of New York and Leesburg, Va., entertained recently at her Leesburg house, Old Oaks, in honor of Mrs. Howard Coffin of Washington.

Included among the guests were Mrs. George Malone, wife of Senator Malone of Nevada; Mrs. Alexander Smith, wife of Senator Smith of New Jersey; Mrs. Robert Hendrickson, wife of Senator Hendrickson of New Jersey; Mrs. James Kem, wife of Senator Kem of Missouri; Mrs. Eugene Milliken, wife of Senator Milliken of Colorado; Mrs. Harry Darby, wife of Senator Darby of Kansas, and Mrs. Owen Brewster, wife of Senator Brewster of Maine.

Mrs. Blake Clark was hostess at luncheon in the Mayflower Lounge yesterday honoring Mrs. Sylvia Trieste, house guest of Mrs. Peter Ansberry. Attending the luncheon were Mrs. Felix de Weldon, Mrs. Robert Schenck, and Mrs. Morris Cafritz.

The hostess, wife of an associate editor of Reader's Digest, is a well-known magazine writer in her own right, and has just chalked up another achievement. This month's issue of National Geographic is largely given over to her piece on Paris with pages of accompanying photographs in color.

Mimi MacArthur, young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas MacArthur, and granddaughter of Vice President Barkley, made her television debut last night on the Tailwaggers program. With her was her Scotch terrier, Dixie, and as added interest, a two-headed turtle.

Miss Jenney was graduated from the Winsor School in 1943 and is an active member of the Vincent Club. She served in the U. S. Naval Hospital Corps during the war and graduated from the Katherine Gibbs School in Boston in 1948.

Mr. Grant is the paternal grandson of the late Robert Grant of Boston. A graduate of the Noble and Greenough School and Harvard University, class of 1941, he is a member of the Hasty Pudding, Institute of 1770 and the Iroquois Club. He was with the U. S. Soil Conservation Service in Washington during the war and later as a reporter with the Daily News. He is now on the editorial staff of the Providence Journal and Evening Bulletin.

Norris-Smith

Dr. and Mrs. Leo Brison Norris announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Marion Hungerford Norris, to Howard Worth Smith, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Worth Smith of Alexandria.

The bride-elect was graduated from Georgetown Visitation Convent and attended King Smith Dramatic School. She is a member of the Washington Junior League. Mr. Smith attended Randolph-Macon College and the University of Virginia.

Tittmann-Moreng

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Trowbridge Tittmann announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Miriam Trowbridge Tittmann, to Dr. Robert E. Moreng, son of Mrs. Joseph Moreng and the late Mr. Moreng of Grantwood, N. J.

The bride-elect was graduated from Holton Arms School of this city and then attended the University of Maryland, from which she was graduated in 1946 with the degree of Bachelor of Science in Agriculture. She is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority, the Arts Club of Washington and of the Colonial Dames.

During the war, Dr. Moreng left the University of Maryland, of which he was an undergraduate, and served in the Infantry with the Army in the campaigns in France and Germany. He also served in the Army Intelligence Corps.

Miss Tittmann's grandparents are the late Rear Admiral Pierce Crosby, U. S. N., and the late Dr. Otto Hilgard Tittmann, one-time head of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey and founder and president of the National Geographic Society.

David Sterling Marries Elizabeth Beach

TWO Washington families were united yesterday in the marriage of Miss Elizabeth Baker Kemp Beach and Patrick David Sterling. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Ferguson Beach, and Mr. Sterling is the son of former Minister to Sweden and Mrs. Frederick A. Sterling. Yesterday's ceremony took place at St. Matthew's Cathedral at 4:30 o'clock, and a reception followed at the home of the bride's parents.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white organdy dress with low round neckline and a tulle veil which fell from an organdy cap. Both cap and dress were edged in applique work. Her bridal bouquet was a cascade of gardenias, orchids and stephanotis.

Miss Grayson Beach was maid of honor for her sister. Other attendants were Miss Barbara Barry, Miss Julia Bowdoin, Miss Anne Mackall, Miss Suzanne Lewis, Miss Fredericka Sterling, all of Washington; Miss Elizabeth Barber of Pasadena, Calif.; Miss Margaret du Pont of Wilmington, Del., and Miss Barbara Gould of Lenox, Mass. Diana Hardin was flower girl.

John R. Williams Sterling was best man for his brother, and the ushers were Blair Childs, Jr., George Hamilton 3d, Wil-mott Lewis, Jr., Chauncey G. Parker 3d, all of Washington; Albert Key and David Key of Essex, Conn.; Chance Vought of Syosset, Long Island, and Edwin Bron of Boston.

The bride attended Holton Arms Junior College, Foxcroft and Potomac. The bridegroom attended the University of Geneva in Switzerland and the Georgetown University School of Foreign Service.

After a honeymoon in Bermuda, Mr. and Mrs. Sterling will live in a house they are building in Georgetown.

Scientist's Son Weds; to Live In Maryland

Miss Laura Jane Kaplan of New York and Oliver Popenoe of Washington were married June 25 in New York City. The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Theodore Kaplan of New York, and her husband is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Paul Popenoe of Altadena, Calif. After a honeymoon on the Maine coast, the couple will make their home in Hyattsville, Md.

The bridegroom's father, a celebrated author and biologist, has written many books on heredity and eugenics. The most recent, "Marriage Is What You Make It," was published last month. He is general director of the American Institute of Family Relations in Los Angeles, and is a member of the Cosmos Club of Washington.

The bride is now enrolled as a student at Maryland University. The bridegroom studied at Pasadena City College and was graduated from Antioch College in 1948. At present he is completing studies for a master's degree in political science at the American University in Washington.

Couple to Live In Gainesville, Fla.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Frank Malmberg, who were married June 5 in Rockville, Md., will make their home in Gainesville, Fla.

The bride's father, the Rev. Dr. William B. Adams, officiated at the ceremony at the Baptist Church on Court House Square, of which he is pastor. Mrs. Adams was matron of honor.

The bride was graduated from Fassfern School and Stetson University, Deland, Fla.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Matron, 38, Well Loved by Husband and Family, Is Troubled by Secret Passion for College Boy Half Her Age, Who Was Daughter's Beau at First

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have a very good husband who loves me very much, and also I have two daughters in high school, and they too love me very much. I should be happy, but I'm not. The trouble is that I am in love with a college boy who is only 20, but seems much older than his age. I am 38.

When I first knew Andy he was going with my elder daughter and seemed to like her very much. Since then, they've stopped dating, as my daughter said she didn't like him enough to go with him, although they're still good friends. I was attracted to him from the first. He was having some difficulties and I was trying in a motherly way to help him work them out, as my husband knew.

We would meet to discuss his plans, and he always referred to me as his "other mother," and said he didn't know how he'd managed before he had my help. One thing led to another and suddenly I was in love with him, which changed our friendship somewhat, although he didn't know why. Finally he guessed the trouble and admitted loving me, too; but felt it was best not to change anything, and that he had no right to love me that way.

Says One Can't Control Heart

REALLY I didn't intend to fall in love with him, but I did. I tell myself it is wrong, but that doesn't alter the fact that I can't think of anything but him. Every time my husband puts an arm around me or kisses me, I wish for Andy. He is a good friend of the whole family and comes to the house occasionally, but only if invited; and he likes to be invited by my husband, for he doesn't want him to get suspicious.

Entertain at Dinner

Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Reysa entertained a group at dinner at Normandy Farm on Sunday evening.

As you know, we don't have complete control of our hearts and cannot help loving someone. Andy likes my whole family and says he doesn't want anyone to get hurt. Yet we both would like things to work out so we could be together in future as husband and wife. I know I have much to be thankful for, and I truly am. But when I think of losing Andy entirely, I feel I just don't want to live. Please tell me what to do. I'm always helping others (that's how I got into this), but now I cannot help myself. D. N.

She Is Greedy for Adulation

DEAR D. N.: Your approach to love is all wrong, it seems to me. You are bent on getting, not giving. You set great store by being loved, and you go to great lengths to attach people to you with sentiments of grateful devotion. You call this self-seeking performance "helping" them. Actually it amounts to a crafty invasion of their soul with intent to acquire "mom"-type control of their personality.

You have a greedy competitive appetite for adulation. You want to be unrivaled queen of hearts in relation to all who catch your fancy, and you take your husband's and children's love very much for granted, feeling that a casual diet of cooing and convenient molluscoding keeps them eating out of your hand, I suppose.

Now, about Andy. You were attracted to him from the start, you say. So you moved in on his friendship for your elder daughter and cut her out, using the serpent wile of allegedly maternal interest to mask your piracy. And she, to save face, and maybe also in sick distaste for the shady implications of your striving, washed her hands of him as a date. Maybe she hoped to get him out of the picture before an intrigue developed.

She's Captive of Frustration

YOU didn't really intend to fall in love with Andy, you say. I'm sure that's true. You only meant to make a conquest of him, something you haven't quite put over; and due to frustration you've become spellbound. Andy has never been more than a passive respondent to your cajolery—and indeed he seems more defensive against than receptive to your recent theory that a love match is in the works here.

You should be ashamed of yourself for muckling into your daughter's world this way. She and her sister have my sympathy, if you don't see your folly and discipline yourself to decent restraint in relation to their beaux. Now that they are entering adult ranks, they are in for a bad time socially, if they can't bring attractive admirers home without running into devious narcissistic man-baiting from you.

You won't die if Andy slips back into his own generation. You'll just gradually return to normal, like a patient coming out of protracted high fever. And if you feel unable to change your pace to avoid seeing him, the moral alternative is to urge him to cut all occasions where you might be—as to retrace his way out of the pitfall into which you led him. M. H.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

Your Figure

You're Lucky That Exercise Was Invented

By Ida Jean Kain

JUST between you and me and the waistline, girls, if no inventive genius had designed calisthenics and there was no possible way of avoiding the dreaded middle-spread or any other figure calamity, wouldn't it be outrageous! The short-waisted girl would go to waist . . . the sedentary worker would keep adding the padding there . . . and posture faults would go from bad to worse. Oh, the pity of it all.

But the science of free body exercise to promote strength and beauty is available to everyone. So what do most women do? They think up strong reasons why they can't take calisthenics. They are not up to strenuous exercise . . . besides they haven't the time. Right . . . most women are not up to strenuous exercise; and few have time for a long workout. But the beauty of calisthenics is that they need not take much time, and they need not be strenuous.

A very small amount of regular exercise, 5 to 10 minutes a day, can work figure miracles. Even 3 minutes of exercise, taken every day, will bring results. It doesn't take time, girls, it takes willingness. Never strain at exercise. What do you want out of exercise? To be more supple, to keep young . . . to be slim in the right places. Fine! The secret is to warm up first with easy, limbering motions that gently prod the circulation into action, and follow through by putting the pull through the muscles that need toning. And last but very important, always stop exercise before fatigue sets in . . . otherwise the invigorating effect is lost.

Bob Hope Was Wrong

'First Daughter' Doesn't Want To Be America's First Lady

By Tex McCrary and Jinx Falkenburg

NEW YORK, June 26.—Margaret Truman smiles at Bob Hope's famous joke—"The only way a Republican will ever get into the White House is to marry Margaret Truman." Says Margaret: "When I do marry, my husband will not be a politician. And though I am delighted to be my father's daughter, I would never knowingly marry a man destined to become the President of the United States."

"Certainly I date Republicans," says Margaret Truman, whose circle of real fans is multiplying fast among all types and ages in New York. "Why shouldn't I go out with a Republican? We never discuss politics"—and here she chuckled—"after all, there are other things to talk about, you know."

Reporters and stenographers respect her earnest efforts to avoid publicity; but one, night on Broadway, things did get out of hand, she admits. A friend from out of town had called up to ask her to go to a theater: "I've got a couple of tickets to something called . . . uh . . . wait a minute, let me look at them . . . oh yes, 'South Pacific' Like to go?"

MARGARET TRUMAN
... won't marry a politician

loved the show even more the second time—but after it was over, they came outside to find it pouring rain. Her young man sloshed down the street in search of a taxi, while Margaret waited under the marquee. Things were fine, until a bunch of kids wriggled close and stared.

"We want a autograph," all the kids shouted at once, as their suspicions were confirmed. Older playgoers began to stare. Margaret whispered desperately to the kids: "If I give you my autograph, I'll be mobbed . . . please, go 'way!'" But it was too late, word flashed through the crowd, and they all pressed closer and shoved papers out at her and patted her on the back. Very friendly, but slowly the crowd pushed her out into the rain: "You know what saved me? Those school girls. Until my date rode up to my rescue in a taxi, those youngsters made a circle and they kept me out of the rain and they didn't let a soul break through—my own little Secret Service!"

Secret Service Gets Bypassed

TACTFULLY, we asked what happened to the Secret Service man who is supposed to follow Margaret everywhere she goes:

"Oh, when I go out with someone in the evening, I never take along the Secret Service man—that's the one time he's not with me. If my date isn't man enough to take care of me by himself, then he isn't much of a date!"

We always pry around the homes of people who are targets for an interview. On Margaret Truman's piano there is a photograph of her mother and father—on a table there is a red elephant, not pink, but red.

"Just a gift," she explains, "and of absolutely no political significance. After all, how could anything red be considered Republican?"

On another table is a trick pitcher that squirts water onto unsuspecting pourers, and on the same table a round dish, with an old French proverb on it: "Qui en hate se marie, a l'air se repent!" ("Marry in haste, repent at leisure.")

At 26, still never engaged, she isn't worried about her career keeping her single.

HOTEL STATLER

With the Korean news providing the buying stimulus, grains opened on substantial advances, and July and January sorbears ran up 10 cents, the daily limit.

within the first few minutes. The market backed down from there, but then came alive again in the latter part of the session.

Wheat closed 4 1/2 to 5 cents higher. Some was 1 1/4-2 1/4 higher, oats were 1 to 1 1/2 higher, rye was 3/4-3/8 higher, sorghums were 7/4 to 9 cents higher and hard red winter wheat 40 to 45 cents higher. Corn was 1/2 to 3/4 higher.

There could hardly have been anything more surprising to the grain trade than developments in Korea over the weekend.

When brokers went home last Saturday their minds were filled with such problems as the amount of new crop wheat which might be sold or the possible demand for corn in Korea. There was no talk of a shooting war in Korea.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Extra! Extra! FBI Caught Napping

It is seldom that a newspaper item carries the heading which appears over this one. But this time it's all too true.

Jess Manbeck of No. 1 Scott Circle tells me it happened when the FBI baseball team was playing the Union Printers on the Ellipse the other afternoon. With a G-Man on first, the first sacker for the Printers pulled a play that's as old as baseball—the hidden ball trick.

be jailed for false pretenses, for masquerading as major league ball players.

PERSONAL NOTES

Lieut. Comdr. E. F. Hayes, USN, U. S. Naval Air Station, Patuxent River, Md.: The juxtaposition was quite funny. But if you're interested in the more serious side of newspapering, there's a simple explanation. Each story in the paper is assigned a brief one-word "slug" for purposes of easy identification in handling. When the story "jumps" from one page to another, the slug word is used to inform the reader about the page and column where the story resumes.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

While cleaning my chicken house, I removed a board covering a hole in the floor and found myself face to face with a mama skunk and her four babies.

I left immediately. What do I do next?

Mrs. John Meyer, Dunn Loring, Va.

P. S.: If any of your readers can give me some information about skunks, maybe I'll have some Give-Aways for you. What I want to know is: How can I get the baby skunks for pets without getting sprayed by their mother? And where can we get babies deodorized? Baby skunks, that is.

Dear Mrs. Meyer:

Are you sure you wouldn't rather have a nice puppy as a pet? Why live dangerously when you have an opportunity to quit while you're a winner?

SUGGESTION BOX

The news that Arlington is going over to the postal "zone" system points up the sad fact that most folks don't know what zone they live in.

Wouldn't it be helpful to make up a batch of stencils and paint the proper zone number on each neighborhood mail box?

GIVE-AWAYS

"Three cute, housebroken kittens." (Lincoln 7-9174.)

"Gentle, peppy housebroken 6-week-old kitten." (Globe 3496.)

"Four cute housebroken kittens, 2 months old; one all black." (Wisconsin 7558.)

"Healthy, affectionate housebroken 1-year-old male cat." (Sligo 8350.)

"Three housebroken 7-week-old kittens." (Hobart 6134.)

"Two sweet boy kittens, 2 months old, part-Siamese." (Woodley 3819.)

"Gentle 1-year-old tabby cat and 2-month-old housebroken kitten; will deliver." P. S. Has anybody offered to give you a crystal ball yet? (Temple 4011.)

(Editor's Note: After each election, Washington is full of unwanted crystal balls. Trouble is, they're no doggone good.)

"Excellent mouser and/or two of her completely housebroken 8-week-old kittens." (Falls Church 0912.)

"Three kittens and grown cat." (Alexandria 1035.)

"Two beautiful male tiger kittens, 6 weeks old." (Temple 0504.)

"Well-trained, affectionate 1-year-old dog, part-cocker." (Owens 7720.)

"Four kittens, will deliver in Bethesda." (Olive 5460.)

"Four cute 7-week-old kittens. When we advertised them before, the mother cat hid them. This time we won't tell her we're writing to you." (Woodley 7484.)

"Four-week-old female kitten, part-Angora." (Chestnut 6144.)

"Young mother cat and two 4-week-old kittens who have had a gentle start in life." (Overlook 6684.)

MAYBE REPUBLICANS ARE OUT OF SEASON

When President Truman was feuding with the Eightieth Congress, it was popularly believed on the Hill that he often ate a Congressman for breakfast.

Mrs. J. A. Tierney of 21 Thompson st., Annapolis, Md., finds what appears to be verification for the theory. A recent edition of this newspaper stated that "Mr. Truman had several Democratic Governors for lunch."

TO PEACE-LOVING JOE

The U. N. Security Council has dispatched a "cease firing" order to Korea. It is to be hoped that a Russian translation also went out to Moscow.

VAGRANT THOUGHT

Just for a change, wouldn't it be wonderful to hear that there's a grave danger that peace is about to break out?

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Wire-Tapping Tangles McGrath

By Drew Pearson

Attorney General J. Howard McGrath, with a good record for straight-shooting, has got himself betwixt and between in the Senate and the Governor of Rhode Island over the wire-tapping scandal.

Here is what he faces: On one side, McGrath was elected to the Senate when he exposed, berated, and campaigned against the Governor of Rhode Island.

McGrath rightly condemned wire-tapping as methods of a Soviet police state and got elected to the Senate.

More recently he has defended the Justice Department for not prosecuting the Amerasia case because the evidence was obtained by illegal wire-tapping and illegal search.

On the other side, McGrath finds that a friend and former Senate colleague was chairman of the committee that arranged for tapping the telephone of Howard Hughes, head of Trans-World Airline, at a time when that Senator—Brewster of Maine—was busy as a bird doing favors for a rival company, Pan-American World Airways.

Furthermore, a Washington police lieutenant was used to tap Hughes' wires, together with three other Washington cops, exactly duplicating Soviet police-state methods.

In the Senate, friends are friends, regardless of politics, and kindly former Senator McGrath doesn't like to prosecute an old colleague.

Report Gathered Dust

The amazing thing is that the Justice Department had an official report on these police-state methods from Major Robert Barrett, head of the Washington police, who did not condone them and who made an official investigation after he found that one of his men, Lieut. Joe Shimon, had eavesdropped on the Argentine Ambassador and Nina Lunn, granddaughter of ex-Senator Wallace White of Maine, during a divorce scandal. This led to the further information that Shimon was also eavesdropping on Senator Brewster's committee, and a report was filed with the Justice Department.

But the Justice Department, though condemning wire-tapping in the Amerasia case, proceeded to do nothing about wire-tapping in the Howard Hughes-Brewster case. Apparently the boys didn't want to tangle with a high-ranking Republican Senator.

In fairness to Attorney General McGrath, it should be noted that he knew nothing of the report—until one week ago. The boys below didn't tell him about it.

But when he learned the facts, McGrath, the Attorney General, did not act like McGrath, the senatorial candidate in Rhode Island, or like McGrath, the critic of Amerasia wire-tapping.

Instead, he called on Senator Matt Neely of West Virginia, chairman of the District of Columbia Committee and who has jurisdiction over Washington police, and proceeded to soft-pedal the whole business.

Not only did he have no adequate excuses for the fact that his subordinates had bushed up the wire-tap scandal for eight long months, but he didn't appear too enthusiastic about having the Senate investigate.

Merry-Go-Round

With the Governors—Governor Dewey made an off-the-record prediction that Governor Lausche (Taft's friend) was sure to be re-elected Governor of Ohio. When the election committee was deciding who should be on the committee of five to steer the Governors' conference next year, it was pointed out that Lausche's term expires this year. "Put him on any way," said Dewey, "he's sure to win."

Gov. "Big Jim" Folsom of Alabama caused colleagues to suspect he wanted to be Ambassador to the Court of St. James's by asking Secretary Acheson how much salary was received by present Ambassador Lou Douglas. "Shouldn't the Ambassador be paid enough so the son of any American can hold that job?" asked Big Jim. (Folsom used to be doorman at Romy's Theater in New York.) ... Broad-gauged Governor Warren of California chided his fellow-Republicans, especially cantankerous Bracken Lee of Utah, about turning up their noses at Federal funds. "We all like to talk about running things ourselves," suggested Warren, "but what would we do without Federal funds for good roads and a lot of other things? You and I know perfectly well we can't finance those projects entirely ourselves."

After Secretary Acheson finished speaking, blunt, gruff Governor Jim Duff of Pennsylvania, a Republican progressive, told State Department officials: "I'm old enough so I don't care about my political future. If you have any trouble with McCarthy in Pennsylvania, call on me. I'll help you." ... In a private talk with Acheson, Dewey was equally sympathetic about McCarthyism. So was Gov. Bonner of Montana, Democrat.
